1 (The following was heard in open court at 2 10:14 a.m.)

3 THE COURT: Good morning.

4 ALL: Good morning, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: Please be seated. This is a case
6 management conference in the Tylenol MDL litigation and 7 we have a rather full agenda today involving first, 8 getting an update on the New Jersey litigation, and 9 then talking about certain of the pending motions, both 10 motions for summary judgment and motions in limine.

11 I know we have certain participants on the 12 telephone and certain participants here. Melissa has 13 given me a list. She has checked off everyone who is 14 here and so I will dispense with the roll call. First 15 of all, with respect to the New Jersey litigation, who 16 wants to report on that?

17 MR. WEINKOWITZ: Your Honor, both sides have 18 submitted letters and unless you have any questions 19 about what is going on if you want a more detailed 20 report, everything that we would report I think is in 21 the letter.

22 THE COURT: Okay. Where are you in terms of 23 a trial date with New Jersey?

24 MR. WEINKOWITZ: The trial date is set for 25 September 16th.

1 THE COURT: So, it is still September 16th,
2 okay. Ms. Jones?

3 MS. C. JONES: Your Honor, I just was 4 standing up when you asked the question about the trial 5 date, I think it is correct that both parties have 6 submitted their responses.

7 I mean, we started out with five plaintiffs, 8 we are now down to three and there are a series of 9 parties in the course of doing discovery in those cases 10 and there are a series of deadlines with respect to 11 motions and hearings on those motions that are set 12 before the trial.

13 I stood, because I am not sure that we have 14 furnished those to Your Honor, and if that is important 15 for any reason that you have that actual schedule we 16 can certainly do that.

17 THE COURT: I don't think I need it at this 18 point. Thank you. Okay. Anything else to discuss 19 before we engage on the pending motions?

20 MR. MILLING: Nothing other than the fact,
21 Your Honor, maybe we can just throw this on the table,
22 I think as we get further into the motions one idea 23 that we had was that at least a couple of the defense 24 dispositive motions at the end have a section on 25 preemption and we thought maybe we could just address

1 preemption maybe before we do the last two motions is 2 the general proposition, because if the Court finds us 3 preempted, then well then there is no reason to do the 4 last two motions.

5 THE COURT: Right.

6 MR. MILLING: If that is agreeable to the 7 defense, we just thought that might make sense as 8 opposed to doing it twice.

9 THE COURT: The last two summary judgment
10 motions?

11 MR. MILLING: Last two summary judgment
12 motions.

13 THE COURT: All right.

14 MR. MILLING: I think there is a little bit 15 of preemption in the fraud.

16 THE COURT: Yes.

17 MR. MILLING: I think Mr. Gainer is going to 18 handle that, but failure to warn and the design defect
19 both have a preemption component raised by the defense
20 and it just might make sense to talk about preemption 21 generally before discussing the motions or else we are 22 going to do it twice.

23 THE COURT: That makes sense. Thank you.
24 All right. With respect to the defendants' motion for 25 summary judgment on the wrongful death time bar, who is

1 going to argue that?

2 MR. ABERNATHY: I will be arguing that, Your 3 Honor, for the defendants.

4 THE COURT: I thought you might. Good 5 morning.

6 MR. ABERNATHY: Good morning, Your Honor,
7 David Abernathy for the defendants, Johnson & Johnson
8 and McNeil, PPC, Incorporated. I guess maybe I am now
9 a specialist in the Alabama Wrongful Death Act. I 10 haven't anticipated being that, but here we are.

11 We have two motions addressed to this Act and 12 it is, obviously, kind of an unusual law. The first 13 motion is a dispositive motion based on the fact that 14 the statute requires that a personal representative as 15 defined in Alabama law be appointed and file suit 16 within two years after the death.

17 And the motion actually presents kind of a 18 simple issue of law because there isn't any dispute 19 that the statutory requirements weren't met. Everybody 20 agrees that the plaintiff wasn't appointed until well 21 after the statutory period.

22 There isn't any dispute, I don't think, based 23 on the papers that if the case was in an Alabama court 24 it unquestionably would have to be dismissed. There is 25 a whole string of cases on that in Alabama and the 1 plaintiffs really didn't take issue with that.

2 Their argument against summary judgment, and 3 I will put to one side for a moment, Your Honor, a 4 couple of waiver-related arguments that I will touch on 5 at the end, but their substantive legal argument is 6 that this issue is governed by a federal procedural 7 rule, Rule 17, and that the plaintiff is entitled to 8 substitute her present self as the personal 9 representative for her former self who sued when she 10 wasn't a personal representative.

11 The key issue here, Your Honor, there is no
12 issue as to whether Rule 17 applies here, clearly it 13 does, we are in federal court. The question is the 14 scope of Rule 17 and whether Rule 17 can be used to 15 override a substantive requirement of state law when 16 that state law provides the rules of decision and we 17 suggest that it cannot.

18 You have to focus here, I think, Your Honor, 19 on the fact that this is a very unusual state law.
20 This is not a law that gives a civil remedy to a 21 particular plaintiff that is then subject to a general 22 statute of limitations, which is a procedural defense 23 that can be waived.

24 The Wrongful Death Act itself incorporates 25 the requirement of suit by a duly appointed personal

1 representative within two years and the Alabama courts 2 are very clear that this two year period is part of the 3 substantive cause of action, it is not a statute of 4 limitation.

5 The substantive cause of action is governed
6 by state law, and while this Court, of course, 7 determines what Rule 17 does and how it applies, the 8 Court, any federal court, has to accept what the 9 Alabama Supreme Court says as to the substantive law of 10 Alabama when it comes to the substantive elements of a 11 case governed by that state law.

12 Actually, when you look at the statute, Your 13 Honor, it is a very unusual statute because it actually 14 doesn't give any remedy for loss to a private 15 plaintiff.

16 The statute, as you know from the prior 17 briefing and some of the other briefing on the motion 18 we are going to talk about next, doesn't allow any 19 compensatory damages at all. You can't recover for any 20 loss or damage to the decedent or her survivors.

21 It only acts as a vehicle by which the 22 personal representative can impose punitive, exemplary 23 damages on a defendant as punishment for causing a 24 wrongful death in order to carry out the state's public 25 policy.

1 THE COURT: Which is what?

2 MR. ABERNATHY: Which is to uphold --

3 THE COURT: Prevent homicide?

4 MR. ABERNATHY: -- the sanctity of human life
5 and discourage homicide as the Alabama courts define 6 it. And the court in several of the cases, and I am 7 quoting from the Hattis (ph) case, which is on page ten 8 of our brief.

9 THE COURT: Right.

10 MR. ABERNATHY: But, it is one of the many 11 that address this, says "The personal representative 12 does not act strictly in his capacity as administrator 13 of the estate. He acts rather as an agent of 14 legislative appointment for the effectuation of the 15 legislative policy. The personal representative of the 16 estate has been empowered to act as a quasi-public 17 person to carry out the legislature's policy."

18 Well, it is a very unusual law, but that is 19 Alabama law, it is what it is. The point is the 20 Alabama legislature had the right to and did impose 21 what it defined as a substantive requirement of that 22 action that you have to be the personal representative 23 duly appointed and suing in two years and that the 24 legislature had the right to do that and Rule 17 is a 25 procedural rule that cannot be used to override the 1 substantive requirements of state law.

2 Your Honor, we filed a motion for leave to 3 file a reply in support of this motion yesterday, and 4 in the proposed reply we talk about the cases raised by 5 the plaintiff.

6 They have cited a number of cases for the 7 argument that Rule 17 allows relation back in the 8 situation. Again, I would argue that this really isn't 9 a Rule 17 issue, because this isn't a situation where 10 you had one person suing, but somebody else was the 11 real party in interest and now we are bringing the real 12 party in interest is. It is the same person, first of 13 all and, in fact, under state law there was no real 14 party in interest.

15 The only person who could be the real party 16 in interest is a personal representative appointed 17 within two years, and that person doesn't exist.
18 Leaving that aside, if you just take the assumption 19 that okay, the belatedly appointed plaintiff is now the 20 real party in interest, if you look at the Rule 17 21 cases that are cited by the plaintiff, they are all 22 cases that either involved a federal procedural 23 limitation that was effectively overcome by the 24 relation back under Rule 17, or a state procedural 25 limitation, in most cases a statute of limitations,

1 none of those cases involved what the plaintiff wants
2 you to do here which is to take what the Alabama courts 3 have said is a substantive element of the cause of 4 action and simply write it out of the statute by the 5 application of a Rule 17. Our argument is simple. The 6 Rules Enabling Act is clear, it does not allow the use 7 of procedural rules to override state substantive law.

8 Very briefly, Your Honor, the plaintiff
9 argued we waived this motion because we didn't bring it
10 as a motion to dismiss. First of all, it is a 11 substantive element of the claim, so summary judgment 12 is the proper time to raise it.

13 Second, if we had brought a motion to dismiss 14 it would have been denied because the original 15 complaint alleged that the plaintiff was the personal 16 representative, it is right in paragraph one.

17 It wasn't true. She wasn't the personal 18 representative, but the pleadings said so, so obviously 19 a motion to dismiss would have been denied and 20 ultimately the issue is only germane now because you 21 have now ruled on choice of law as the plaintiff 22 requested, that this Act applies, so now we have to 23 address it.

24 Finally, they also argue that this is 25 hypothetical because we don't know what the state court

1 judge would have ruled on this issue if we had moved 2 then.

3 I don't think you can oppose a motion after a 4 removal by arguing that the state court judge might 5 have ruled differently. Once the case is here it is 6 here.

7 THE COURT: You mean the state court judge -- 8 this was filed in Philadelphia County, right?

9 MR. ABERNATHY: It was filed in the 10 Philadelphia Common Pleas. It was never presented to 11 the state court judge.

12 THE COURT: Right.

13 MR. ABERNATHY: They have argued it is a 14 hypothetical motion because we don't know what the 15 state court judge would have ruled. Well, you never 16 know what the state court judge would have ruled when 17 you are in federal court after removal, but I don't 18 think that is relevant.

19 The only other point I would like to make,
20 Your Honor, is I think without arguing it explicitly 21 there is an underlying theme in the plaintiffs' 22 opposition that this is unfair, that it is going to 23 deprive the plaintiff of an adjudication on the merits 24 and that this technical issue shouldn't be raised in 25 order to prevent her from her substantive claim being

1 brought.

2 I take the point you can make a perfectly
3 respectable argument that the Alabama state law
4 requirement is overly technical, is unreasonable, isn't 5 necessary. All interesting arguments, but I don't 6 think they belong here.

7 This is Alabama law as the Alabama Supreme 8 Court applies it. They asked for Alabama law and they 9 can't now argue I shouldn't be required to meet its 10 requirements. And the plaintiffs certainly could have.

11 There is no reason she couldn't have been 12 appointed within the statutory period. When she sued 13 she sued and claimed she was the personal 14 representative, so she and her counsel obviously knew 15 the capacity they were supposed to sue in, but she 16 didn't have that capacity.

17 They asked for the application of Alabama
18 law, you ruled that it applies, but they can't now turn 19 around and say I don't have to meet its substantive 20 requirements, and for that reason, whether we think the 21 rule is technical or not it is Alabama law, it has to 22 be followed and summary judgment should be granted.

23 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Abernathy.

24 MR. GAINER: Good morning, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: Good morning.

1 MR. GAINER: Gil Gainer on behalf of the 2 plaintiff. Your Honor, the defense began its argument
3 with two statements which are certainly true. This is 4 a simple issue of law, and Federal Rule 17 applies.

5 That is the analysis as far as the analysis 6 needs to be taken. Every Supreme Court case, every 7 circuit court case that has faced this particular issue 8 has allowed the relation back of the subsequent 9 appointment of a personal representative to the 10 commencement of the action.

11 It really is as straightforward as that. In 12 the brief, the reply brief that the defense referenced 13 filed yesterday, in page six it says "The fact remains, 14 regardless of where this case originated, it is here 15 now, that is exactly right." It is in federal court as 16 they removed it here, and Rule 17 applies, and I hate 17 to repeat, but I think it is that straightforward.

18 Every Supreme Court decision, every circuit 19 court decision that has been faced with the issue of 20 whether or not to relate back the filing of the formal, 21 I should say, appointment of the personal 22 representative to the commencement of the action has 23 done so.

24 Now, briefly, this began over 50 years ago,
25 or half a century ago, in the Levinson versus Deupree

1 case, and contrary to what I think I heard, which was 2 that this is only applicable or the cases that we have 3 cited has only been applicable to Rules of Procedure 4 and so forth, the Levinson versus Deupree case was 5 based on state law. It was based on the law of 6 Kentucky.

7 There was a one-year statute of limitations
8 and similar to Alabama and Kentucky they require that 9 an administrator be appointed and that that appointment 10 take place prior to the expiration of the statute of 11 limitations, and the lower courts did apply that.

12 However, the Supreme Court in Levinson
13 declined to do that and specifically held that because 14 it is in federal court and the federal rules apply that 15 the relation back of the subsequent filing or 16 subsequent appointment of the personal representative 17 related back to the filing of the commencement of the 18 action. So, that was the genesis of it.

19 In 1966 Congress enacted Federal Rule 17 and 20 in the committee advisory notes it was stated that this 21 was intended to codify, if you will, the holding in 22 Levinson.

23 Subsequent to that, again, every circuit
24 court opinion that has addressed this issue, including 25 a circuit court opinion coming out of the State of 1 Alabama has applied the relation back rule.

2 And I should back up and say, because this is 3 a principle that has endured since the Levinson case, 4 the Supreme Court said that when a case is pending in 5 Federal Court the rules or procedures may not be 6 identical, but that has continued to be the case and even 7 though Kentucky would not have allowed the relation 8 back of the formal appointment of the personal 9 representative it did, nevertheless, relate back.

10 In the case of Hess versus Eddy, this is a 11 case originating out of Alabama and similarly the 12 appointment of the personal representative came after 13 the statute of limitations.

14 The Eleventh Circuit held despite the fact 15 that under state law a different outcome would occur, 16 this is in federal court and the Federal Rules of Civil 17 Procedure apply, just as was stated moments ago, 18 Federal Rule 17 applies in every case, circuit cases or 19 Supreme Court case, applying Rule 17 to this particular 20 issue has related it back.

21 And there are other circuits, we mention them 22 in the brief, the Crowder (ph) case, there was the 23 Wadsworth case. Some of these involved the enforcement 24 of the federal claims, some involved state claims. It 25 really makes no difference. Once it is in federal

1 court the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure govern and 2 Rule 17 allows relation back.

3 Insofar as the issue of waiver, it was simply 4 to say, and it was misstated, it should have been 5 motion for summary judgment if that had been solved, 6 and that would have been adjudicated. It was not.

7 The point is, and has been amply made, the 8 case is here now and yes, the Supreme Court has said, 9 and it was quoted in several different cases, but one 10 case it was stated that the "If the rules of procedure 11 work as they should in an honest and fair judicial 12 system they not only permit, but nearly as possible 13 guarantee that bonafide complaints be carried to an 14 adjudication of the merits." And that was in the Hess 15 case citing a Supreme Court case, which is also in our 16 brief in footnote 19.

17 However, the State of Alabama or the State of 18 Kentucky or other states may look at the relation back 19 rule, it is procedural. After all, the real goal here 20 is to identify the real party in interest, that they be 21 joined to the case before the case goes to trial so the 22 defendant knows that however this case comes out, 23 trial, appeal, settlement, whatever, it is res 24 judicata.

25 It is a procedural issue in its nature and so

1 it has been treated by the federal courts from 1955 or 2 1954 when the Levinson case was first issued by the 3 Supreme Court coming forward, and as a result, the real 4 party in interest was joined or ratified, if you will, 5 in this case, a year and a half before this motion was 6 filed.

7 Under Rule 17 if there is going to be an 8 objection to whether or not someone is a real party in 9 interest that party is allowed additional time or 10 reasonable time it says under the rule, to ratify or 11 join, substitute and so on.

12 Well, in fact, this had already taken place a 13 year and a half before. Ms. Hayes was formally 14 appointed as the representative of the estate of her 15 sister.

16 So, subsequent to that the short form
17 complaint was filed. At the time the short form 18 complaint was filed in this Court she was, in fact, the 19 duly appointed representative of the estate of her 20 sister.

21 And consequently, under the Federal Rules and 22 under all of the case law that, in fact, related back 23 to the commencement of the action which was well before 24 the statute of limitations expired. Any questions, 25 Your Honor?

1 THE COURT: So, you would agree that were 2 this to be decided under the Alabama courts, the 3 section is a nullity and it would be dismissed, 4 right?

5 MR. GAINER: Well, I think that nullity, and 6 I don't mean to shave words, there is a difference 7 between nullity or void ab initio and voidable. Even 8 in the state of Alabama there are cases where the suit 9 has been filed and subsequent to the suit being filed, 10 even though the statute requires that the personal 11 representative be duly appointed at the time of the 12 filing of the suit, they have allowed relation back to 13 the filing of the suit provided the appointment took 14 place before the statute expired.

15 THE COURT: That's not our case here.

16 MR. GAINER: It is not. So, arguably, was it 17 voidable under Alabama law? Yes. Had we remained in 18 state court and a state court judge decided to apply 19 Alabama law instead of New Jersey law, then it would 20 have been adjudicated and it could have been 21 adjudicated in their favor.

22 On the other hand, the Court may have done 23 just exactly as Judge Johnson did, which is apply New 24 Jersey law instead of Alabama law, and in that case New 25 Jersey works just like Rule 17 in federal court.

1 Just like the rule works in Georgia, which is 2 that the subsequent appointment relates back. It is 3 simply a procedural matter and it is simply a question 4 of making sure the real party in interest is joined 5 before trial so that the defense knows that it is res
6 judicata and that that case will not be brought again 7 by someone else claiming to be the real party in 8 interest.

9 So, yes, sir, that is correct, but once
10 again, there is not a single Supreme Court case, there 11 is not a single circuit court case that has not applied 12 the relation back rule in the exact circumstances that 13 we have here.

14 And beyond that, there was some discussion,
15 for example, in the defense brief about the Erie 16 Doctrine. And the Supreme Court made it very clear in 17 Hanna versus Plumer, it is only when a federal rule
18 doesn't apply or that it does not cover, I should say, 19 the issue in the case. Only when there is a federal 20 rule or a lack of a federal rule that covers the issue 21 in question do we consider (inaudible).

22 Here, clearly, we have a rule that covers the 23 issue, which is Rule 17. And just as was said in the 24 opening for the defense this morning, Rule 17 applies.
25 And in every case the Court has treated it as a rule

1 that provides for relation back of the subsequent 2 appointment of a personal representative.

3 THE COURT: Thank you.

4 MR. GAINER: Yes.

5 THE COURT: Mr. Abernathy, in reviewing the 6 papers I had some concerns about your position in light
7 of the Levinson case and Mr. Gainer has quoted language 8 from the Hess versus Eddy decision. How do you get 9 around Levinson, and that was a wrongful death case, 10 right, that was Alabama law?

11 MR. ABERNATHY: Well, let me talk about both 12 of those cases, if I could. First of all, you may have 13 just gotten the impression that there are cases in 14 which the late appointment of a personal representative 15 was allowed to relate back in an action under the 16 Alabama Wrongful Death Act case, and that isn't so.

17 If you read all of the cases cited in the 18 plaintiff's brief, none of them involve relation back 19 for a late appointed representative under the actual 20 law we are talking about, the Alabama Wrongful Death 21 Act.

22 The plaintiffs' brief says that Eddy is a
23 wrongful death case out of Alabama. It is a bit of a 24 misnomer. It is not an Alabama Wrongful Death Act 25 case. It is a case under Section 1983 of Title 42 in 1 which federal law supplied the rule of decision and the 2 federal court borrowed the two-year period in the 3 wrongful death act as a federal statute of limitation 4 for the federal action and said this is a federal 5 action in a federal court, so we are going to apply 6 Rule 17 to (inaudible) relation back. No quarrel with 7 that, but it has nothing to do with overriding the 8 Wrongful Death Act substantive requirement.

9 Levinson actually did not turn on state law.
10 It was a federal admiralty case that, again, borrowed
11 Kentucky's statute of limitations for a federal case.
12 That said, if you look at the case law you will 13 certainly find cases where a statute of limitations, 14 either state or federal, was not allowed to bar the 15 action because Rule 17 allowed relation back.

16 But, again, this is not a statute of 17 limitation, it is a substantive element of the claim, 18 and no case holds that under the Alabama Wrongful Death 19 Act you can apply Rule 17 to allow relation back and 20 override that substantive requirement.

21 It isn't really an Erie issue per se. The 22 critical issue here is the Rules Enabling Act is a very 23 specific federal statute that applies here that says 24 the rules cannot be allowed to enlarge or modify a 25 substantive right. That means you can't override the 1 substantive requirements of state law with the Federal 2 Rules of Civil Procedure.

3 And by the way, there are cases in which the 4 late appointment of a personal representative was not 5 allowed to relate back, Mauer (ph) and Conley are both 6 cited on our original brief.

7 Those are similar state laws where the 8 federal court said you can't allow it to relate back 9 because the substantive requirement of state law 10 required the personal representative to sue within a 11 specific period of time.

12 So, yes, it is certainly true, we agree Rule 13 17 applies here but, again, what is Rule 17 allowed to 14 do and what is it not allowed to do? It is not allowed 15 to write a substantive requirement of state law out of 16 existence.

17 THE COURT: Thank you.

18 MR. GAINER: Your Honor, may I respond 19 quickly?

20 THE COURT: Sure, Mr. Gainer, sure.

21 MR. GAINER: Thank you. First of all, Your 22 Honor, again, going back to the Levinson case, there 23 seems to be some confusion there. This was, in fact, 24 brought under the Wrongful Death Statute of Kentucky.
25 This wasn't some borrowing.

1 This was, in fact, at a time where there was 2 no recovery under federal law, even -- and the Court 3 references that a maritime law does not allow for 4 recovery for wrongful death. That is at page 650.

5 This was, in fact, brought under the state
6 law of Kentucky because it happened in Campbell County, 7 Kentucky. And just like Alabama they had a rule that 8 required the personal representative bring the case, 9 file the case, and that that representative be duly 10 appointed at the time of filing.

11 Notwithstanding that the Supreme Court of the 12 United States ruled otherwise and the Federal Rules 13 were considered to apply and this was procedural and it 14 fostered, if you will, the codification of its opinion
15 into Rule 17 as we now know it in 1966.

16 In Hess there also seemed to be some 17 confusion. That case did happen, that wrongful death 18 did occur in the State of Alabama and the Eleventh 19 Circuit said, most importantly the rule, and they are 20 referring to the rule of relation back, most 21 importantly the rule is to be applied even where the 22 courts of the forum state have rejected the relation 23 back doctrine. They could not have been clearer about 24 that.

25 It matters not whether the basis of the 1 wrongful death action arises out of a product liability

2 case, a medical malpractice claim, an automobile
3 accident, a 1983 action. Those can be filed in state 4 court just as they can in federal court.

5 Jones Act cases, which is a federal statute, 6 can be filed in state court as well as state and 7 federal. It matters not which of those it is, it is a 8 question of whether or not the Alabama result, which 9 would be not to allow relation back, applies in federal 10 court, and it clearly does not. Every Supreme Court 11 case, every circuit court case has said that, and this 12 Eleventh Circuit case was specifically an Alabama death 13 case.

14 Now, the two cases that the defense just 15 mentioned, first of all, the Mauer case, these were 16 both district court opinions, so let's be clear about 17 that. These were not circuit court opinions, these 18 were not Supreme Court decisions.

19 The Mauer case involved someone who had not 20 filed the claim for wrongful death until after the 21 statute had expired. That's simply not applicable 22 here. The claim was filed before the statute of 23 limitations expired by some seven or eight months.

24 In Mauer, again, a district court case, the 25 plaintiff did not even file the wrongful death claim

1 until after the statute expired. It is clearly 2 distinguishable.

3 The other one is frankly something of an 4 outlier. It goes against the precedent set by the 5 Supreme Court, the precedent set by certain courts of 6 appeal. There are some other things that could be 7 distinguished but, again, what has already been stated
8 is that the Rule of Federal Civil Procedure 17 applies 9 in this case and that is the simple issue before the 10 Court.

11 It is here, under the Federal Rules of Civil 12 Procedure, it relates back. There is no harm, frankly, 13 to the defendant. The real party in interest, which is 14 the whole point of the rule, has been accomplished.
15 This case, whether it goes to trial, appeal or 16 settlement, will be res judicata. Enormous time and 17 effort has gone into this case since its selection and 18 so forth, and it is set for jury trial.

19 And we would ask the Court to do just as the 20 Supreme Court has done, nothing out of line with what 21 the Supreme Court has done or the circuit courts of 22 appeal have done, but simply apply the rule as it has 23 been since 1954, which is to allow the appointment of 24 the personal representative to relate back and as was 25 stated in several different cases, allow this case to 1 proceed to an adjudication on its merits. Thank you, 2 sir.

3 THE COURT: Thank you. Let's move to the 4 next motion which is the motion regarding the punitive 5 damages claim, punitive damages statute and the 6 challenge to the constitutionality of that statute.

7 MR. ABERNATHY: Good morning, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Welcome back.

9 MR. ABERNATHY: Once again, I am in for a 10 penny, I am in for a pound. So, we are back to the 11 Wrongful Death Act and focusing in this motion on its 12 rather anomalous rule for damages, which as you know 13 does not permit any compensatory damages, does not 14 permit any consideration of the actual loss to the 15 plaintiff or the decedent or the value of the life 16 lost, but allows only punitive damages.

17 Now, it is an anomalous law. I think it is 18 actually unique. It has certainly gotten a lot of 19 criticism, but to be clear, criticism by both federal 20 judges and a lot of judges of the Alabama Supreme Court 21 in various descending opinions, but to be clear that's 22 not what the motion is about.

23 However strange, unusual, illogical, unfair, 24 pick any adjective you want, this rule may be, it is 25 the law of Alabama and Your Honor has to accept that

1 for purposes of this motion.

2 The only issue presented here is whether or 3 not this unique way of assessing punitive damages is 4 constitutional. The plaintiffs suggest in their brief
5 that Your Honor has already ruled on this. I think 6 Your Honor will no doubt recall your own ruling on 7 choice of law which you discussed some of this law, but 8 said this ought to be in a dispositive motion, so here 9 it is.

10 THE COURT: We talked about in the footnote
11 as I recall.

12 MR. ABERNATHY: Right. And you haven't ruled
13 on it, you've certainly identified the issue. You said 14 if we wanted to present it to present it in this kind 15 of a motion.

16 THE COURT: That's the last time I will do
17 that.

18 MR. ABERNATHY: Well, we are all learning
19 lessons here, I guess, but the plaintiff also points 20 out quite correctly that this specific statute was 21 upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court in the Louis Pittis 22 Dry Goods case in 1927.

23 I would suggest to Your Honor that that 24 decision doesn't really tell us anything useful about 25 today's problem for two reasons. First of all, the

1 issue in that case was whether you can impose vicarious 2 liability for punitive damages, that's not our issue.

3 Second, and more importantly it was decided 4 in a different world before any of the contemporary due 5 process jurisprudence on punitive damages was issued by 6 the Supreme Court six or seven decades later.

7 Your Honor, I want to focus on what I think 8 is the central problem here and that is the 9 proportionality requirement of Gore. The Supreme 10 Court's --

11 THE COURT: This really is a Gore BMW issue, 12 is it not?

13 MR. ABERNATHY: It is a Gore Campbell
14 proportionality between compensatory and punitive
15 damages. That is the core of the issue here, and I 16 don't think there is any quarrel with the fact that 17 application of the three guideposts in Gore is 18 mandatory. The Supreme Court has said that again and 19 again and the Alabama Supreme Court said that in some 20 of the cases in which it dealt with this issue 21 including Cherokee Electric.

22 So, the question is what is this 23 proportionality guidepost require or allow you to do.
24 If you look at the Supreme Court cases they are very 25 clear and consistent in focusing on the proportionality

1 between the harm as measured by compensatory damages
2 and the amount of the punitive damages. And that is 3 the focus in all of these cases.

4 In Haslip the Court talked about -- it is not 5 a Wrongful Death Act case, but it was actually an 6 Alabama case, and talked about the fact that the 7 compensatory damages or the punitives were four times
8 the compensatories and said that is close to the line 9 on due process, although they upheld it.

10 In Gore the punitives were found excessive
11 because they were more than 500 times compensatory 12 damages. In Campbell the Court specifically said "The 13 amount of the harm to the plaintiff and to the general 14 damages recovered," that's what the punitives have to 15 be proportional to. And in Gore they talked about the 16 long pedigree of this rule that punitive damages have 17 to be proportional to compensatory damages.

18 So, the Alabama courts have also wrestled 19 with this issue and addressed it in a number of cases.
20 And some of those decisions, including Cherokee 21 Electric and Lance have candidly admitted we can't 22 really apply this Gore factor.

23 Cherokee Electric says Alabama law allows no 24 compensatory damages in a wrongful death case. This 25 factor, therefore, does not apply here. Can't do it.

1 So, then you will see other Alabama court cases which 2 obviously recognize the problem that poses, because if 3 you can't apply the guideposts and they are mandatory
4 as the Supreme Court says they are, then you have a due 5 process problem.

6 So, you do see some Alabama decisions
7 including Tillis Trucking and Beaudreaux (ph) that say 8 well, we don't apply the proportionality factor
9 formulaically, but we kind of do it. We can't compare 10 compensatories to punitives like the Supreme Court 11 decisions do, U.S. Supreme Court decisions, but we are 12 going to in some inchoate, undefined way compare our 13 sense of the harm to the plaintiff, to the punitives 14 and decide whether it's proportional or not.

15 I would suggest to Your Honor that, you know, 16 it's an interesting rhetorical device and the Alabama
17 courts have been very clear, we are just not interested 18 in revisiting this issue. Beaudreaux said that very 19 specifically, we're not going to revisit Tillis
20 Trucking and these earlier cases, but it doesn't really 21 work. It doesn't work on a logical level, it doesn't 22 work on a legal level.

23 In fact, if you look at the Alabama cases 24 that say this, well, we are doing it, we are just not 25 doing it formulaically, they don't explain what that

1 means.

2 They don't explain how a court forms some 3 inchoate sense of what the harm is when there is no
4 compensatory damages to measure it, and then somehow 5 comes up with a concept or a plug number or something,
6 they don't say, and do the comparison that you
7 otherwise would do under Gore.

8 But, there is really a more difficult 9 underlying problem here because according to the 10 Alabama courts compensatory damages are not permitted
11 in Wrongful Death Act cases because the Wrongful Death 12 Act addresses the inherent value of human life which 13 cannot be measured in dollars.

14 So, the Alabama courts are not only saying we 15 don't allow compensatory damages, they are saying we 16 don't allow compensatory damages because under our 17 state law we regard the thing that is being addressed 18 as inherently non-measurable in dollars.

19 Well, if you can't, not only won't, but can't 20 measure it in dollars how can you possibly do the 21 proportionality review that Gore and these other cases 22 contemplate?

23 The plaintiffs do point in their brief to the 24 fact that there are a lot of Alabama decisions that 25 apply state court standards and reduce punitive awards,

1 and there are a number of reported cases where they 2 apply these Green Oil factors, that's the Green Oil
3 case is one of the cases, and they reduce the punitive 4 award.

5 But, the fact that a punitive award can be,
6 in some cases, reduced under state law doesn't mean 7 that the process by which it is awarded complies with 8 federal constitutional due process requirements and, in 9 fact, in Gore the Alabama Supreme Court did reduce the 10 punitive damages under state law and the Supreme Court 11 still held that the award violated due process.

12 Your Honor, again, we can't and don't argue 13 that you should refuse punitive damages under the 14 Wrongful Death Act because it is an anomalous, strange, 15 old rule that nobody has anymore. That is not the 16 issue. The problem here is that it is a very old and 17 different rule and constitutional due process has 18 passed it by.

19 The rules have changed. The standards by 20 which punitive damages are determined aren't the same
21 anymore and for whatever reason Alabama's legislature 22 and courts have chosen not to adjust their process to 23 meet those requirements.

24 You have to accept Alabama law as it is for 25 the purpose of determining Alabama law, but you can't

1 defer to the Alabama Supreme Court on whether the 2 Alabama law is constitutional.

3 THE COURT: So, if I understand you, the 4 Haslip case and I think that was two years after the 5 Green Oil case talks about Alabama having, well, not a 6 compensatory damages claim. There is this, I think 7 they refer to it as a full panoply of review that 8 includes the jury verdict, the post-verdict motions and 9 appellate review which in the end guarantees that 10 proportionality, I don't know if you call it a right, 11 but that there is a proportionality analysis, albeit 12 possibly played out over several steps in the 13 litigation and not a formula for the jury to apply.

14 That's an early 1990s case. Then, you have 15 Gore decided in when, 1996?

16 MR. ABERNATHY: Gore was 1996.

17 THE COURT: Right.

18 MR. ABERNATHY: And I think the critical 19 factor here, Your Honor, is that --

20 THE COURT: So, your position is that Gore
21 changed the jurisprudence here?

22 MR. ABERNATHY: Well, both Haslip and Gore
23 and even more so Campbell in focusing even more 24 explicitly on the comparison between compensatory and 25 punitive damages, and the presumptive single digit rule

1 which Your Honor recognized later in the Morris case
2 all changed the jurisprudence, but I think the critical
3 factor on Haslip and Gore is that they are not Wrongful 4 Death Act cases.

5 So, in Haslip and Gore you have different 6 kinds of claims where you have compensatory damages and 7 you can actually do an analysis as to whether the harm 8 as determined by the jury in compensatory damages, is 9 proportional to the punitive award.

10 If you have a Wrongful Death Act case and you 11 have no compensatory damages and you're determining 12 sort of a proxy for what compensatory damages would be, 13 you're in effect making the decision that really would 14 normally be in the jury's hands as a matter of jury 15 trial except a Wrongful Death Act, unlike these other 16 claims in Gore and Haslip don't allow it.

17 So, it is really, I would suggest, Your 18 Honor, a problem that is unique to the unique rule of 19 this Act. It doesn't act as a burden on the normal 20 punitive damage rules in Alabama for other claims or 21 the kind of punitive damage rules you have in any other 22 state where you do have compensatory as well as 23 punitive damages.

24 THE COURT: All right. Gore wasn't even a 25 personal injury case. I think that was repairs to a

1 car.

2 MR. ABERNATHY: Gore was the guy who was 3 upset because they touched up the paint on his BMW and 4 sold it as new and he said he should have been told 5 that there were repairs. So, it was a consumer fraud
6 case. Haslip was an insurance fraud case.

7 But, these are all cases where you have 8 compensatory damages. It is the absence of that, the 9 fact that harm is never determined or compensated under 10 the Wrongful Death Act, it is that unique rule that 11 creates the problem here.

12 THE COURT: Thank you.

13 MR. MILLING: Your Honor, good morning.

14 THE COURT: Good morning.

15 MR. MILLING: Clay Milling on behalf of the 16 plaintiff and I am thrilled to hear that you say this 17 is the last time you're going to invite this, because 18 that hopefully means it is the last time I am going to 19 stand up and talk about due process.

20 This is, in essence, although framed a little 21 bit differently, an issue that the Court has been 22 analyzing over the last few months in your ruling on 23 Alabama law you've articulated in, I think it is, 24 footnote 42 or 44, all of the relevant cases.

25 We certainly adopt your reasoning that this

1 law, and to the extent that it was not said explicitly, 2 at least our implicit reading that it is 3 constitutional.

4 The issue that the defendants are raising in 5 this Court boils down to, you know, really we talked 6 about proportionality, but the defendants in their 7 brief have raised two of the Gore what they call 8 guideposts, the reprehensibility and then the 9 proportionality.

10 As to the first one, the defense says that 11 the wrongful death verdict can't be reviewed for 12 reprehensible conduct because no reprehensible conduct 13 is required, and to that we say how can that be the 14 case because Alabama courts have been doing this long 15 before Gore.

16 And we cite the Hammond case, we cite the 17 Green Oil case. We cite cases in footnote 19 of our 18 brief going back from 1991 to 2012, all of which have 19 been reviewed and all of which found that without 20 having this precise -- well, and before Gore, without 21 having this precision the concept was that at the end
22 of the day we want to make sure that the punitive 23 damage award is consistent with the conduct and the 24 harm, and that's really actually what Gore says. Gore
25 does not say -- Gore says -- Gore mentions a monetary

1 figure, but it doesn't say you have to use a monetary
2 figure. And since Gore --

3 THE COURT: But, it says there does have to 4 be a rational relationship between the actual harm to 5 the plaintiff and the punitive damages awarded against 6 the defendant, right?

7 MR. MILLING: The harm to the plaintiff and 8 the conduct and I think I would direct the Court --

9 THE COURT: But, here, in this instance, in 10 the Alabama wrongful death world we can award or have 11 to award punitive damages for negligent conduct, right, 12 or for a product defect. It doesn't even have to be 13 negligent.

14 MR. MILLING: We award damages -- the Alabama 15 measure of what I like to call level one damages is 16 damages based on the conduct of the defendant, yes.

17 THE COURT: But, there is no level two, 18 right? There is just one level of damages and it is 19 punitive?

20 MR. MILLING: There is just one -- there -- 21 it is based on the conduct of the defendant which in 22 traditional other state laws would certainly be 23 considered the second level, which is punitive, that is 24 correct.

25 THE COURT: But, that is not Alabama. If we

1 were in Pennsylvania it would be were you negligent and 2 caused an accident? Yes, here is the compensatory 3 damages.

4 MR. MILLING: No question.

5 THE COURT: Were you wildly negligent and 6 reckless and so forth, well, then maybe there 7 outrageous conduct and then there is a punitive award, 8 but we don't have that here.

9 MR. MILLING: We don't have that here. But, 10 what we do have is we have case law up through the 11 Supreme Court with Gore and then being followed by the 12 Alabama Supreme Court with Beaudreaux. We have the 13 Haslip case, which was before Gore, but saying, as you 14 pointed out, that we have looked at this Alabama 15 Supreme Court, Alabama Wrongful Death law and the 16 factors are -- there are a full panoply, as you said, 17 of protections.

18 THE COURT: Well, they said. I wouldn't use 19 such a big word.

20 MR. MILLING: Yes, I would have to look it up 21 myself. But, I think the case that sort of highlights
22 this is the Beaudreaux case, and the Beaudreaux case
23 was $20 million medical malpractice wrongful death 24 verdict reduced to $4 million.

25 And one of the big reasons that the Court

1 reduced it was because the Court found low level
2 reprehensible conduct. And as the lawyer in my office 3 likes to say when she listed these guideposts and she 4 really did it, it's not that hard.

5 The court reduced it because in medical 6 malpractice cases, as Your Honor is very much aware, 7 very much decisions are made on the spur of the moment, 8 there was no -- in that case there was no allegation of 9 reprehensible conduct. The jury just gave an award
10 that the Court realized when looking at the guideposts 11 didn't make sense.

12 You can compare that to a case of an alleged 13 cigarette manufacturer who has known theoretically that 14 cigarettes are addictive and carcinogens and they don't 15 disclose that and the conduct goes on for years and 16 years, the result would be different.

17 But, the bottom line is the defense in this 18 case as it relates to both reprehensibility and as it 19 relates to proportionality wants to say look, we demand 20 more precision, but the truth of the matter is that 21 after Gore both the Alabama Supreme Court has gone on 22 in both Beaudreaux and Tillis to say that the 23 proportionality, we apply the proportionality, but we 24 just don't do it mathematically, and it doesn't have to 25 be done mathematically. It can be done by a totality

1 of the evidence type of situation.

2 The bottom line from the plaintiffs'
3 perspective is that going back to 1927 when the Supreme 4 Court first looked at this, following through with the 5 Green Oil, the Hammond case, the Beaudreaux case, the 6 Tillis Trucking case, the courts that have analyzed 7 this have all determined and, again, most recently,
8 very recently, the Alabama Supreme Court that this is a 9 constitutional way to do it and that Gore doesn't say 10 you have to do it with mathematical precision and we 11 would ask that the Court deny the motion.

12 THE COURT: So, how did Beaudreaux apply
13 Gore?

14 MR. MILLING: Beaudreaux applied Gore, but 15 with a reduction of the $20 million.

16 THE COURT: $20 million to $4 million, right?

17 MR. MILLING: To $4 million.

18 THE COURT: Right.

19 MR. MILLING: In order because the Court
20 found that in looking at the guideposts, $20 million 21 for that conduct and that injury didn't make sense.

22 THE COURT: Okay. So, what was the 23 multiplier or the factor or the -- how did they -- they 24 just laid their hands on it and decided that $4 million 25 was better than $20 million?

1 MR. MILLING: There was no multiplier, but 2 what the Court said in Beaudreaux it says "Because 3 Alabama's Wrongful Death Statute provides for only 4 punitive damages, Alabama courts are unable to apply 5 formulaically the pertinent Gore guideposts in 6 examining the reasonableness of a punitive damages
7 award by comparing it to the compensatory damages
8 award.

9 "As Tillis trucking makes clear, however, a 10 punitive damage awarded a wrongful death case may 11 nonetheless be compared and evaluated, though perhaps 12 not in a strictly mathematical sense, by means of a 13 'proportional evaluation of the award amount, the 14 conduct of the defendant and the resulting harm from 15 the conduct.' Thus, because of the award of punitive 16 damages in a wrongful death case is subject to a 17 proportionality review," which is in essence what Gore 18 says.

19 THE COURT: A proportionality review by the 20 appellate court.

21 MR. MILLING: Or by the trial court.

22 THE COURT: Okay.

23 MR. MILLING: Yes.

24 THE COURT: All right.

25 MR. MILLING: We are inclined not to revisit

1 Tillis Trucking, and that's 2012.

2 THE COURT: Okay. So, what do you do with 3 the notion that Gore, as a matter of due process -- the 4 due process rights of the defendant, requires that the 5 jury have some compensatory damages, some evidentiary 6 basis upon which they can multiply or base an award? of 7 It seems to me that Beaudreaux is saying

8 okay, the due process is there, but it is coming later 9 in the game. It is not a due process situation when 10 the jury is deciding punitive damages. They are just 11 looking at what happened and saying $20 million.

12 MR. MILLING: But, at the end of the day,
13 respectfully, wouldn't it be the same? If we had a 14 compensatory award and then a jury decided in this case 15 to give -- let's say that we were dealing with 16 different statutes and the jury gave a very significant 17 punitive damages award that Your Honor found was 18 excessive under the Gore guideposts, Your Honor would 19 still be in a position to remit that just as the 20 Alabama court can do it, and the only difference is one
21 is doing it -- if Your Honor decided to do it on a 22 strictly mathematical basis that would be one way to do 23 it, but Gore does not require that.

24 And so Alabama just says we're not doing it 25 on the strictly mathematical basis, we are doing it on

1 a proportionality based on the conduct, the injury and 2 the totality of the evidence which, while it may be 3 different, I think you could logically argue that 4 formulaically is awfully stringent and from the 5 plaintiffs' perspective as it comes to an award of 6 punitive damages, and so you can see the argument on 7 both sides.

8 The bottom line, though, is all of the courts 9 up through the most recent Alabama courts that have 10 looked at this have come down on the plaintiffs side.

11 THE COURT: So, what is the jury instruction 12 to those eight people sitting in that box about what 13 formula or standards they should use to award damages 14 under this wrongful death?

15 MR. MILLING: I cannot answer that, but I
16 know Mike looked at them. Mike, do you know the jury 17 instruction, by chance, of the wrongful death? I don't 18 want to answer it if I can't answer it.

19 THE COURT: Well, yes, I mean I'm just trying 20 to think through this with you and my concern with this 21 law is how to instruct the jury. I mean, I get 22 questions back from jurors that say what formula should 23 we use. Well, then the response is apply the law that 24 I gave it to you and base your verdict on the evidence 25 and good luck.

1 I mean, I totally understand, I mean I think
2 I understand your point. I am just a little concerned
3 about, you know, where does Gore require that due 4 process be -- that due process be part of the equation?

5 MR. MILLING: And I guess the response is on 6 both sides. From the defense, the defense would like 7 due process to be formulaic and a multiplier, and the 8 plaintiff might say due process from the plaintiffs' 9 perspective, we are not so keen on the formulaic. We 10 would rather have it be more based on the totality of 11 what the jury heard.

12 And what the Alabama courts say, it said we 13 are leaning towards the latter, that has been looked at 14 by the Supreme Court a long time ago. It has been 15 revisited. It has been stated that there is all kinds 16 of protections and it has been then followed by the 17 Alabama Supreme Court up until recently. Thank you.

18 THE COURT: And, Mr. Abernathy I think 19 makes a good point that the earlier review of the 20 Alabama punitive damages statute was what, in the 20s, 21 1927?

22 MR. MILLING: The earlier -- the first time
23 it was reviewed by the Supreme Court was 1927, I 24 believe.

25 THE COURT: The Supreme Court was calling

1 baseball a game, not a business back then, so things 2 have changed.

3 MR. MILLING: I do have a cite to the Alabama 4 pattern jury charge in our brief and it says the 5 Alabama pattern jury charge instructions inform the 6 jury they are to determine damages in accordance with 7 the culpability of the defendant, i.e. how bad his or 8 her conduct was. That's what the charge is. Alabama 9 pattern jury instruction 11.28.

10 THE COURT: Right. Okay. Thank you.

11 MR. MILLING: Thank you, Your Honor,

12 MR. ABERNATHY: Your Honor, could I just make 13 two points very quickly?

14 THE COURT: Sure.

15 MR. ABERNATHY: First of all, I meant to say 16 this earlier and I am sure Your Honor is probably aware 17 of it, but I did not want to fail to note that Federal 18 Rule 5.1 comes into play here.

19 We did give a notice under Rule 5.1 to the 20 Attorney General of Alabama and the court, as I read 21 the rule, is required to allow the attorney general to 22 be heard within the stated period of time before it
23 declares that the statute is unconstitutional. So, I 24 did not want to miss that point.

25 THE COURT: Have we heard from the attorney

1 general?

2 MR. ABERNATHY: I have not heard from the 3 Attorney General and I honestly don't know. I mean, 4 obviously this issue has been litigated in other cases
5 and I frankly have no idea whether the Attorney General
6 ever intervenes to address this issue. I just wanted 7 to note the rule because it does come into play.

8 MR. MILLING: Your Honor, I have heard from 9 the Attorney General. The Attorney General will 10 intervene on an appellate level, it will not intervene 11 at the district court level.

12 THE COURT: Have they told us that?

13 MR. MILLING: That's what I have been told.

14 COUNSEL: No, but they are, as far as I read 15 the rule we have to certify first and then (inaudible)
16 if 60 days has passed, and after 60 days (inaudible)

17 THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

18 MR. ABERNATHY: So, we may have to deal 19 without anything from the attorney general. The only 20 substantive point I wanted to address from Mr.
21 Milling's argument, I take his point with respect to 22 reprehensibility and we address this in our brief, but 23 it is a little bit different than the issue of 24 proportionality.

25 At least with respect to reprehensibility you

1 can argue that the jury is told to determine the amount
2 of punitive damages based on reprehensibility, so there 3 is at least some basis for the Court arguably to 4 address that, although there needn't be any 5 reprehensible conduct at all as it is commonly 6 understood, because it could be awarded on mere 7 negligence.

8 The bigger problem really is proportionality
9 because the harm to the plaintiff or her decedent isn't 10 relevant and can't be tried. It is not part of the 11 case.

12 You can't award the damages -- you can't 13 award punitive damages based on the harm to the 14 plaintiff, and we cited a number of the Alabama courts 15 that have said you can't come into the trial under the 16 Wrongful Death Act and say oh, look what you did to the 17 plaintiff or look how valuable her life is, or look 18 what she lost, it is not relevant.

19 So, here, you know, the argument is you're 20 going to make some determination of proportionality 21 without compensatory damages, but there isn't even a 22 record because it isn't tried. It is not relevant to 23 the case.

24 So, from our point of view it is the 25 proportionality which has to focus as we read Gore and

1 Campbell at least in part on the proportion between 2 compensatory damages and punitives, that's the biggest 3 problem.

4 THE COURT: Thank you.

5 MR. MILLING: And the final word, Your Honor, 6 I will just do it from here if it is okay. First of 7 all, in Gore, again, Gore said -- Gore did not state 8 that compensatory damages are the only permissible 9 measure of harm.

10 In fact, the Court emphasized that there is 11 no mathematical bright line in Gore, but there must be 12 a reasonable relationship between the harm and the 13 punitive damages award. That's on page 582 of the 14 decision.

15 Secondly, when Mike walked over he made a 16 good point which is the issue is is there due process.
17 There is due process in this case both at the trial 18 court level and at the appellate court level.

19 The trial court, although the jury is the 20 trier of fact, you are listening to the entire case and 21 you are able to exercise your discretion as Alabama 22 courts have to say I believe based on the 23 proportionality, reprehensibility and the guideposts as 24 they are not formulaically applied in Alabama that I 25 think the award is appropriate or I think the award is 1 inappropriate and take responsibility as is the 2 appellate court.

3 So, I think the issue is at the core 4 constitutionally is there due process and there has 5 been -- I don't think anyone has stood up and said or 6 cited a case that has come down and said this statute
7 is unconstitutional because it does not afford 8 appropriate due process to either party as I have 9 discussed.

10 THE COURT: Except as I understand -- I will 11 go back and think about this, but as I understand due 12 process in the Gore context it is what process does the 13 jury follow, what is available to the jury in assessing 14 those damages.

15 And the due process that you want me to find 16 here, I think, is maybe due process at, you know, 17 5,000-feet, looking at the whole process, start to 18 finish, was there due process to both sides.

19 And I think Gore seems to focus on what is 20 available to the jury and what process does the jury 21 follow in assessing that award of punitive damages.

22 THE COURT: And the due process here, as we 23 have mentioned with the jury charge, would be the jury 24 is to determine based on the totality of the evidence 25 if it finds that there has been a wrong and, again,

1 let's not forget, we have to find there has been a
2 wrong before we get to the issue of Alabama's measure 3 of damages.

4 If they find there has been a wrong, that the 5 plaintiff has succeeded on a claim, then they have to 6 determine their damages based on the conduct. That is 7 the standard. And then the issue becomes -- so that 8 would be -- that has been analyzed and has been the 9 standard, as we know, going back to before the 1920s.

10 Then the issue becomes should the Court
11 disagree with that as the Supreme Court stated in 1991.
12 There are a panoply of protections to making sure that 13 at the end of the day, just like in the malpractice
14 case, the award is appropriate if, in fact, the jury 15 got it wrong just like the Court is free to do with the 16 remitter.

17 THE COURT: All right.

18 MR. MILLING: Thank you.

19 THE COURT: Thank you. Okay. I believe Mr.
20 Milling's suggestion for the next three motions involve 21 the general discussion of preemption as sort of a way 22 to approach those?

23 MR. MILLING: I just thought, or we thought 24 and, of course, we can do it however, that we might 25 want to have a discussion of preemption and get Your

1 Honor's feeling on preemption, get some of those issues
2 out on the table, and if it appears Your Honor wants to 3 then continue with argument then the question would be 4 okay, let's talk about is there a material fact, 5 genuine issue of material fact on failure to warn, is 6 there a genuine issue of material fact on design
7 defect. Does that make sense?

8 I just think it might categorize the 9 argument, unless you disagree, Christy?

10 THE COURT: Ms. Jones?

11 MS. C. JONES: Oh, I am happy to do whatever 12 the Court wishes us to do. I think frankly, Your 13 Honor, that we are dealing with very different things.
14 The first motion that I understand is on Your Honor's 15 agenda deals with the issue of fraud and --

16 THE COURT: Fraud on the FDA, right?

17 MS. C. JONES: Well, it deals with fraud on 18 the FDA or fraudulent concealment.

19 THE COURT: Right.

20 MS. C. JONES: And I think those are very 21 different issues from those that are addressed in the 22 subsequent issues. So, I am happy to do it any way you 23 want to.

24 But, I personally think it will make more 25 sense to the Court, and maybe that is only because

1 that's the way it does to me, to put it in the context 2 of the arguments that we are going to be hearing rather 3 than a broad discussion of preemption. But, if that is 4 what Your Honor wishes to do, I am happy to do it.

5 THE COURT: My preference I think would be to 6 go motion by motion. If there is some overlap with the 7 preemption discussion, I am okay with that.

8 MR. MILLING: I think that's fine. In fact,
9 what I was going to say was that we were actually going 10 to suggest that the fraud issue go on its own and the 11 preemption issue, the basic, express and applied 12 preemption really applied to the latter two briefs 13 as Ms. Jones stated appropriately. So, I agree with 14 that.

15 THE COURT: Okay. Why don't we take a five 16 minute break and then we will talk about the short form 17 complaint and fraud issues.

18 (Recess 11:23 a.m. to 11:42 a.m.)

19 THE COURT: We'll hear argument on the next 20 motion or two, break maybe around 12:15, take a lunch 21 break, and then we will continue this afternoon. Ms.
22 Jones, good morning.

23 MS. C. JONES: Good morning, Your Honor.
24 Christy Jones, and I am standing up here because I 25 think that the next one that is on the agenda in the

1 order that it was suggested is one of the short form 2 complaint.

3 THE COURT: Short form complaint, yes, yes.

4 MS. C. JONES: To be sure, Your Honor, you
5 may remember that several months ago we talked about 6 the contents of the short form complaint and the extent 7 to which certain claims made under that complaint were 8 recognized under Alabama law or whether, in fact, the 9 plaintiffs intended to proceed.

10 And I am sure the Court is delighted that the 11 parties were able to stipulate the applicability of the 12 vast majority of those claims.

13 THE COURT: Yes.

14 MS. C. JONES: The only issue that is 15 currently before the Court are the claims that appear 16 in paragraph IX and XI that relate to the issue of 17 fraud and fraudulent concealment under Alabama law.

18 Let me first say for the Court I think it is 19 clear from our papers there is no question that Alabama
20 law recognizes that there may, in fact, be valid claims 21 for fraud and fraudulent concealment.

22 However, the issue before the Court today is 23 whether or not those counts are, in fact, product
24 liability actions recognized by the State of Alabama, 25 and I suggest to Your Honor that that is not the case.

1 THE COURT: Okay.

2 MR. C. JONES: The reason that that is 3 important is that we are here to address specifically 4 the issue of express preemption here. As the Court is 5 aware, under the FDA Modernization Act of 1997 Congress
6 passed legislation that includes an express preemption 7 provision under 21, U.S.C., Section 379 and 8 specifically that express preemption provision applies 9 to any requirement that relates to an over-the-counter 10 drug that is different from or in addition to or not 11 identical to the requirements under the Federal Food 12 Drug and Cosmetic Act of the FDCA.

13 That provision, Section 379, also includes a 14 savings provision that specifically says that nothing 15 in that express branch and Shelby construed to modify 16 or affect product liability law.

17 And under Alabama law product liability law 18 or product liability claims include those based upon 19 negligence, negligent misrepresentation, the Alabama 20 Extended Manufacturers Liability Doctrine, AEMLD, or 21 breach of express or implied warranty and no other 22 provision, and that is specifically set forth in 23 Alabama Statute 65501, which defines the product
24 liability under Alabama law.

25 In this particular case there are two issues

1 that the plaintiffs have raised. The first the 2 plaintiff had raised the question of whether or not 3 there is, in fact, a jury question.

4 I respectfully submit to Your Honor that the 5 law is clear that the question of preemption is a 6 question of law to be decided by the Court and I
7 specifically point Your Honor's attention to the Dubois 8 versus National Passenger Railroad decision out of the 9 Third Circuit for that authority.

10 The plaintiff, however, claims that the fraud 11 claims do fall under the savings claims and they do, as 12 I understand their argument, for two reasons. One, 13 because Alabama recognizes the fraud claims, and that 14 is true, Alabama does recognize that, as I said 15 earlier.

16 However, the plaintiffs ignore the plain 17 language of the statute, 65501, that defines and 18 circumscribes what falls within a product liability 19 claim, and more important, the plaintiffs in this case 20 rely upon the Wyeth versus Weeks decision for their 21 proposition that Alabama recognizes a fraud claim.

22 I think it is important for the Court to 23 understand several things. First, Weeks involved a 24 prescription drug. It did not involve an 25 over-the-counter drug. Therefore, it did not involve

1 either the express preemption provision of Section 379
2 nor the savings provision of 379 and did not address 3 either of those.

4 Secondly, and perhaps most important, the 5 Weeks court specifically held that that claim that was 6 being adjudicated in Weeks was not a claim about a 7 plaintiff ingesting a drug that was defective. In 8 other words, it wasn't a claim involving product 9 liability, but it involved only allegations that the 10 manufacturer fraudulently misrepresented information.
11 And the court held that those claims were not product 12 liability claims under Alabama law, but distinct fraud 13 claims.

14 So, what that decision specifically held was 15 yes, it is true, as we have said, that Alabama 16 recognizes the existence of claims for fraudulent and 17 fraudulent concealment, however, those claims are not 18 product liability claims under Alabama law as defined 19 by the AEMLD or under statute and, therefore, for those 20 reasons, it is our position that the express preemption
21 provision of 21, U.S.C., Section 379 expressly preempts 22 those claims and they cannot be asserted in this 23 particular action.

24 There are some additional arguments that we 25 made that related specifically to (inaudible) and fraud

1 over on the U.S. The plaintiffs did not respond to 2 that. I frankly suggest to Your Honor that that is not 3 really an issue that is necessary to be addressed in 4 this case inasmuch as one, the plaintiffs didn't 5 respond to it, but more importantly, it is very clear 6 that the express provision, the express preemption
7 provision preempts the claims for fraud in this case 8 because they are not product liability claims under 9 Alabama law.

10 THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

11 MS. C. JONES: Thank you.

12 MR. GAINER: Your Honor, as the defense has 13 just stated accurately, this is confined to whether or 14 not a fraud claim survives in this particular case 15 involving an over-the-counter drug.

16 However, there were a couple things which I
17 think the Court needs to understand clearly in making 18 its decision about the survivability or that this claim 19 includes fraud claims in a product liability setting.

20 Ms. Jones mentioned the Wyeth versus Weeks
21 case and indicated that it was not a product liability 22 case, but it was, in fact, a pharmaceutical product 23 liability case, and the question certified to the 24 Alabama Supreme Court and this is cited in our brief, 25 Your Honor, but this was decided by the Alabama Supreme

1 Court just last year, in August of 2014.

2 The question was, under Alabama law may a 3 drug company be held liable for fraud or 4 misrepresentation based on statements made in 5 connection with the manufacturer distribution of a 6 brand name drug by plaintiff claiming physical injury 7 from a generic drug and distributed by a different 8 company.

9 Clearly, this was, in fact, certainly a 10 product liability case. What the Court did make some 11 distinction was to say that the product liability law
12 in Alabama is not limited to the Alabama Extended 13 Manufacturers Liability Doctrine, the AEMLD.

14 In fact, in that decision at page 657 for the 15 purposes of this certified question we will not treat 16 the Weeks' claim as AEMLD claims governed by the 17 principles of AEMLD.

18 So, the point of that is to say this is 19 certainly a product liability case and the Court would 20 specifically ask whether a drug company can be held 21 liable in fraud in misrepresentation in connection with 22 statements it makes in connection with the drug, and 23 the answer to that was in the affirmative, yes it can.

24 And so going back once again to that section
25 and the savings clause as it is referenced, Section

1 379(r)(E), going back to another Wyeth case, Wyeth
2 versus Levine case, while that involved a prescription 3 drug the Supreme Court specifically addressed at 4 footnote eight that Congress did enact, while it 5 excluded some things as it relates to 6 over-the-counter drugs it expressly preserved state
7 product liability claims, and I just want to briefly
8 address it.

9 In 1997 Congress preempted certain state
10 requirements concerning over-the-counter medications
11 and cosmetics, but expressly preserved product 12 liability actions.

13 Well, this again, arising in Alabama it is a 14 question of what are those product liability actions.
15 Well, yes, they include the AEMLD, but they also 16 include fraud, negligent misrepresentation, negligent 17 suppression, and it is specifically so stated in the 18 Wyeth versus Weeks case. Again this is referenced in 19 our brief, Your Honor, but I will revisit it for a 20 minute.

21 We do not find the boundaries of the 22 judicially created AEMLD so that it subsumes common law 23 torts actions of negligence, wantonness and other 24 claims which are actually provided by statute. We have 25 recognized that fraudulent suppression is a claim

1 separate from an AEMLD case.

2 So, in the context of product liability law
3 in Alabama, to make it as simple as I can, they do have 4 a judicially created doctrine. It is sort of a hybrid 5 of strict liability, that is the AEMLD.

6 But, they also have other claims that can be 7 made against a manufacturer which include fraud and 8 suppression of material facts, misrepresentations, and 9 it has been so recognized as recently in the Supreme 10 Court decision in Alabama.

11 There was some mention, I believe, about an 12 issue that is covered later, Your Honor, in our 13 MIL that I think is not on today's agenda, but had to 14 do with, I believe, an allegation of fraud against the 15 FDA.

16 We have not pled fraud against the FDA. The 17 Buckman case doesn't apply, but that will be addressed
18 later, perhaps in part in the comments that Mr. Milling 19 will make later today or Mr. Tisi, and it is certainly 20 covered more in depth, if you will, in one of the 21 motions in limine that the Court will hear at the next 22 case management conference. Thank you.

23 THE COURT: Thank you. Go ahead.

24 MS. C. JONES: Just briefly, Your Honor. I
25 think we clearly read the Weeks case very differently.

1 The Weeks case very specifically affirmed that 2 fraudulent suppression is a claim separate from AEMLD, 3 and Mr. Gainer did not respond to the fact that the 4 Statute 65-5-501 specifically defines product liability
5 actions as including negligent misrepresentation claims 6 under the AEMLD and no other.

7 So, I think that the question is what 8 actually amounts to a product liability action is 9 recognized by Alabama, and as I tried to make the 10 distinction the distinction is not that Alabama doesn't 11 recognize a fraudulent or fraudulent concealment claim, 12 it does. But, those are very different claims and 13 separate and apart from the product liability actions.

14 THE COURT: Which are typically defect or 15 design cases.

16 MS. C. JONES: Exactly. And, therefore, they 17 are specifically and expressly preempted under the 18 statute.

19 MR. WEINKOWITZ: Your Honor, Mike Weinkowitz,
20 just to clarify one thing. There is a fraud on the FDA
21 Buckman motion in limine, it is motion in limine number 22 two, that's what Mr. Gainer was talking about.

23 Our entire fraud on the FDA argument is set 24 forth in that motion in limine and I footnoted that, so 25 we have addressed that despite what counsel said.

1 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

2 MS. C. JONES: I am happy to argue that, Your 3 Honor, if Your Honor wants to argue that in this 4 context. I would suggest to you that our same argument 5 applies in that first a fraud on the FDA claim also 6 falls within those that are specifically preempted but,
7 secondly, and more importantly, under the Buckman 8 claim, that is, specifically preempted.

9 And if Your Honor wants to argue that in the 10 context of the motion in limine I am happy to do that.

11 THE COURT: Let's talk about it at that time.

12 MS. C. JONES: Okay. Thank you, very much.

13 THE COURT: Thank you.

14 MR. GAINER: Your Honor?

15 THE COURT: Yes.

16 MR. GAINER: I want to address this and I
17 certainly want to for the sake of completeness for the 18 Court.

19 First of all, again, what matters here is 20 what constitutes a product liability claim in Alabama, 21 and the Supreme Court case here in Wyeth versus Weeks 22 decided just last year made clear what those were.
23 That is the law of the state, if you will.

24 It included fraudulent suppression and 25 material misrepresentation, fraud, so forth. Those

1 all, in addition to what would be under the AEMLD 2 allowed in a product liability case.

3 THE COURT: All right.

4 MR. GAINER: This particular holding, and I 5 want to be certain that this is made clear, again, for 6 the sake of completeness for the Court, this actually 7 provided for innovator liability, which is not an issue 8 here. Innovator liability meaning that the case was 9 against a name brand manufacturer for harm caused by a 10 generic drug. So, it was not the actual drug made by 11 the name brand manufacturer. The legislature in 12 Alabama had subsequently determined not to have 13 innovator liability, but they did not disturb anything 14 else in this decision.

15 And the principles stated by the Supreme 16 Court in Alabama about what constitutes a product 17 liability claim which includes fraud, it includes 18 material misrepresentation of facts or suppression of 19 material facts, wantonness, negligence, AEMLD, is all 20 still the law of the state, and I just wanted to be 21 sure I was complete with the Court on that.

22 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

23 MR. GAINER: Okay. Thank you.

24 THE COURT: We have a motion for summary
25 judgment on the failure to warn claim. Ms. Jones are 1 you going to argue that?

2 MS. C. JONES: I am, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Okay. And I am mindful of your 4 suggestion that we ought to quit about 12:15 and so you
5 are in a position to see the clock better than I am,
6 but I would be happy to stop at any time --

7 THE COURT: Take whatever time you need, all
8 right?

9 MS. C. JONES: -- that is appropriate for 10 Your Honor. Let me see if I can put this in context.
11 The plaintiff, as you know, asserts a wrongful death 12 claim in which he claims that a therapeutic dose of 13 Tylenol led to her death, led to acute liver failure 14 and to her death.

15 There are several issues that will be before 16 the Court eventually. They are not before the Court 17 here that include the issue of whether or not she, in 18 fact, experienced acute liver failure or whether or not 19 it, in fact, was due to another condition such as 20 sepsis or an overdose of Tylenol. And for our purposes 21 here, setting those aside and we are only dealing with 22 the issues of failure to warn.

23 The plaintiff claims that McNeil failed to 24 adequately warn of the risk of acute liver failure 25 associated with the use of Tylenol. Specifically, the 1 plaintiffs have taken the position that the warning is 2 inadequate, and at least one of the reasons that the 3 plaintiffs have said that the warning is inadequate is 4 because there is no warning to specific populations of 5 patients that may take the drug that they may be more 6 vulnerable such as those who are fasting or 7 malnourished.

8 In this particular case it has been and it is 9 the position of McNeil that the science and the 10 medicine establishes that the therapeutic and 11 recommended doses of Tylenol have not been shown to 12 cause acute liver failure.

13 In order for the plaintiff to recover for 14 failure to warn under the AEMLD, and with the Court's 15 permission I am just going to refer to it as failure to 16 warn from now on, the plaintiff must establish three 17 facts.

18 One, that the labeling is inadequate. Two, 19 that an adequate labeling would have been read and 20 heeded and, three, that the inclusion of a different 21 warning would have prevented the injury.

22 THE COURT: Are you okay?

23 MS. C. JONES: I am fine. I thought that the 24 court reporter and technical people were having some 25 problem with me, so I apologize.

1 THE COURT: Okay. Fine.

2 MS. C. JONES: Under the Gurly (ph) case that 3 we have set forth for Your Honor in the brief, it is 4 clear that the warning must be one that is reasonable 5 under the circumstances, but it need not be the best 6 possible warning.

7 That there is no duty to warn of every 8 potential danger or indeed to explain the scientific 9 rationale for each warning, but only a duty to warn of 10 those dangers which the user would not be aware of, and 11 here I suggest to Your Honor that we clearly warned of 12 the potential of liver damage.

13 Let me see if I can go back and to put this 14 into perspective, but I think -- because, I think it is 15 important for the Court to be reminded about the 16 chronology that is applicable here.

17 If Your Honor will remember as early as 1977
18 it was recognized that with excess doses of Tylenol you 19 could have liver damage and, in fact, that was 20 recognized by both the FDA and in studies with that 21 acknowledgment and still Tylenol was considered to be 22 safe and effective when used according to directions.

23 Extra Strength Tylenol, which is what we are 24 here about today, was initially approved as a new drug 25 in the early seventies and, therefore, was under one

1 set of new drug application and regulations where the 2 FDA specifically found it to be safe and effective as 3 labeled.

4 Subsequently, in 1988 a tentative final 5 monograph was promulgated by the FDA, and you will 6 remember that there are two separate regulatory 7 procedures, pathways, by which a drug can be approved 8 and regulated and that the analgesics and 9 acetaminophens, other than those that were specifically 10 approved as new drugs, ultimately are governed under 11 the monograph process.

12 In 1988 when the tentative final monograph
13 was published there was no organ specific warning
14 required under the monograph. So, that there was no 15 specific requirement for a warning of liver damage at 16 that time.

17 In 1994 McNeil amended its labeling to 18 include warnings relating to alcohol, which are not 19 applicable in this case, but nonetheless that was 20 initially done with the new drug application which was 21 subsequently withdrawn.

22 In 2001 an overdose warning specifically was 23 added about the severe complications that might arise 24 as a result of overdose. In 2002 the FDA held an 25 advisory committee meeting to consider acetaminophen

1 and at that time McNeil advised of its intent to modify
2 the label to include a liver specific warning 3 associated with overdose and the like.

4 In 2003 the FDA, in fact, approved that liver
5 warning, and in 2004 McNeil incorporated that liver 6 warning on its Tylenol packages. That was before the 7 FDA promulgated anything under the tentative final 8 monograph.

9 In 2006 the FDA issued a proposed rule that 10 would include liver specific warnings associated with 11 excessive use or overdose of Tylenol. In 2008 there 12 was an FDA working group that made certain 13 recommendations, and in 2009 the FDA promulgated a 14 final rule under the monograph which, in fact, became 15 the final rule with the full force and effect of a 16 final monograph, even though it is only one rule.

17 And in that -- at that time with the benefit
18 of all of the foregoing, the FDA promulgated what now 19 appears in 21, U.S.C., Section 3286, which is the 20 requirements for the contents of the label insofar as 21 it relates to liver damage in the event of excessive 22 use of acetaminophen, and that label, Your Honor, 23 appears on page seven of our brief.

24 And I had some -- a list of forewarnings that 25 Your Honor does not have the exhibits here, I brought

1 with me copies of the 2009 and 2010 labels --

2 THE COURT: Thank you.

3 MS. C. JONES: -- that are involved in this 4 case and implemented. I brought those because I want 5 to put this into context in that the plaintiff and the 6 issues that -- the plaintiff we are dealing with here
7 allegedly took Tylenol in August of 2010.

8 Now, I gave Your Honor both of those labels
9 because the plaintiffs say on one hand that Ms. Hayes 10 took Tylenol, Extra Strength Tylenol from a bottle 11 purchased in 2009.

12 The testimony is also that in August, 2010, 13 shortly before her death or her hospitalization, 14 another bottle of Tylenol was purchased, neither of 15 those bottles still exists.

16 Following the death of the decedent the 17 testimony is that her sister disposed of all of the 18 remaining medicine bottles that she was taking. That 19 sister is now deceased and we do not have any evidence 20 to speak of of showing exactly what product she 21 actually took and exactly which label was on the 22 product.

23 I gave Your Honor both of those labels and 24 the 2010 is cited, and frankly we think that the 2010 25 is the standard that ought to govern in this case and

1 the final rule because we think, you know, frankly
2 given the fact that it is the plaintiff's fault, if you 3 will, that we no longer have the bottle that it makes 4 sense that the 2010 label, which is the one that would 5 have been applicable at the time would have been 6 purchased in 2010 ought to be applicable.

7 THE COURT: Which one is 2010?

8 MS. C. JONES: Without looking at them I
9 can't -- I can --

10 THE COURT: Do you know them, Melissa? Okay.
11 (Pause in proceedings.)

12 MS. C. JONES: The 2010 one is --

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 MS. C. JONES: -- this one.

15 THE COURT: Thank you.

16 MS. C. JONES: And I will say to Your Honor 17 that's 2010, that the significant difference of the 18 2010 versus 2009 label for our purposes is the word 19 "severe."

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MS. C. JONES: And if you look at the 2010
22 label, and Your Honor, I apologize if I have been 23 thinking appropriate, I would have had them blown up 24 for easier reference, but if you look under warnings on 25 the left-hand side, if you see the warning it says

1 "This product contains acetaminophen. Severe liver 2 damage may occur" --

3 THE COURT: I see.

4 MS. C. JONES: -- if you take more than eight
5 caplets in 24 hours, which is the maximum daily 6 amount," do you see that?

7 THE COURT: I do.

8 MS. C. JONES: If you then compare it with 9 the other document you will see that it refers to liver 10 damage as opposed to severe liver damage. And for our 11 purposes here that is the primary difference in the two 12 labels.

13 THE COURT: Right.

14 MS. C. JONES: Now, the reason that I went 15 through the chronology and think that it is important 16 is the following. Beginning in 2004 and the 2009 label 17 specifically says "Don't take more than recommended.
18 Don't take more than eight tablets in 24 hours, don't 19 take it for longer than ten days, acetaminophen may 20 cause liver damage, stop using, consult a doctor if 21 pain doesn't resolve within ten days and overdose 22 taking more than recommended may cause liver damage."

23 That was in the 2009 label all before the 24 promulgation of the final label in 2010. At the time 25 of the 2010, excuse me, the 2009 final rule being

1 promulgated the FDA also considered whether or not 2 there should be a mention of fasting or malnutrition
3 mentioned in that label, and if you will remember, I 4 went through the various history.

5 One of the things that the FDA had set out in 6 2006 is an issue to be determined or to study was 7 whether or not there were certain groups who might be 8 more vulnerable, including those who were malnourished.

9 In 2009 when the FDA promulgated the final 10 label specifically the FDA said, and this is in Exhibit 11 E to our brief, and it is in the 2009 federal register, 12 Your Honor, that I have here, if you need another copy, 13 a little bit more paper to add to what you already 14 have.

15 THE COURT: Thank you.

16 MS. C. JONES: At that point on, I will tell 17 you the page number, on 19397, Your Honor, of the 18 Federal Register, it specifically said "We are not 19 requiring any warning that malnourished consumers are 20 at an increased risk of liver injury when using 21 acetaminophen as directed," and goes on to say that 22 "The data does not sufficiently demonstrate that 23 acetaminophen when used according to label poses an 24 increased risk of liver injury in those individuals 25 relative to other individuals."

1 When the FDA promulgated the final rule in 2 2009 under the regulations that final rule must contain 3 the language that is promulgated in that rule and that 4 has since been codified, if you will at 21, CFR, 5 Section 326.

6 Your Honor, I am mindful of the time, I am 7 happy to go forward and I am also happy to stop, it's 8 whatever Your Honor prefers.

9 THE COURT: How much longer do you have on 10 this topic, do you think? I don't want to limit your 11 presentation.

12 MS. C. JONES: I can, I mean if Your Honor
13 will indulge me, ten or 15 minutes, I can probably go 14 through the entire argument and just set it all out for 15 Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: Let's do that, yes.

17 MS. C. JONES: If you want to. Okay.

18 THE COURT: Let's do that.

19 MS. C. JONES: So, having set that forth, I 20 would like to go back and talk about specifically the 21 requirements of the AEMLD, and I would like to start, 22 first of all, with the proof that the language of the 23 warning must be shown to be inadequate.

24 I think it is important for Your Honor to 25 know the plaintiffs have suggested that 21, CFR,

1 Section 201.80 governs the responsibilities here of the 2 defendant. That is incorrect.

3 The language there and the title of this is 4 specifically "Specific requirements on content and 5 format of labeling for human prescription drug and 6 biological products, older drugs not described in 7 201.56."

8 And 201.56 is the section that sets out the 9 requirements on content and format of labeling for 10 human prescription drugs and biologicals, not the 11 over-the-counter drugs, and that becomes important, 12 Your Honor, for the following reasons.

13 That provision includes, the 201.80 includes 14 a provision that the plaintiffs have relied upon under 15 warnings that suggests that the manufacturer has a duty 16 to revise a label and to include a warning as soon as 17 there is reasonable evidence of an association with a 18 serious hazard of a drug.

19 That does not apply to the manufacturer of an 20 over-the-counter drug, and that is inconsistent with 21 the promulgation of the final rule of the FDA, which 22 specifically requires the use of the language on the 23 warning or the use of the language as to the liver 24 damage as promulgated in 2009. So, I think that is 25 important.

1 So, if we go back to the adequacy then of the 2 label, it is our view that the plaintiffs cannot 3 demonstrate, first of all, that the labeling was 4 inadequate to advise of the risk of liver damage 5 because it, in fact, even in 2009 before the 6 promulgation of the final rule McNeil had voluntarily
7 incorporated language there that related specifically 8 to liver damage.

9 And, secondly, the FDA promulgated specific 10 language in 2009 that must be incorporated and was 11 incorporated and even the plaintiff's expert, Mr.
12 Rakanau (ph) specifically recognized and testified that 13 once the final rule was promulgated by the FDA that 14 exact language had to be used as it related to liver 15 damage.

16 And, in fact, McNeil did that. That is 17 important because in the plaintiff's brief on pages, I 18 think it is page six and seven, they have a litany of 19 things that they believe should have been included with 20 respect to liver damage, none of which are included in 21 the FDA's final rule, none of which are included there 22 after the years and years of study and seeking comments 23 and so forth.

24 So we would suggest, first of all, that the 25 plaintiffs cannot prove by definition that the labeling

1 was inadequate. Secondly, the second point that 2 plaintiffs must prove under the AEMLD is, in fact, that 3 the plaintiff would have read and heeded a different 4 label. They simply cannot prove that.

5 First of all, Ms. Hayes is deceased, and 6 there is no evidence specifically as to what she did or 7 did not read and, in fact, whether or not she followed 8 the directions.

9 There is, it has been suggested, much 10 supposition in the testimony of her sisters that we 11 think she would have done this or we believe she 12 trusted this, or we think she saw advertisements, but 13 the reality of it is that none of that testimony gets 14 beyond sheer speculation or indeed would be admissible, 15 and it certainly ought to be excluded under Federal 16 Rules of Evidence Rule 404 in terms of character 17 evidence if that's what they would rely upon to get it 18 in. It simply cannot supply them.

19 More important is what we do know is that 20 she did in fact, according to her sisters, take Tylenol 21 despite the fact that clearly liver warnings were on 22 the package.

23 That two, despite the fact that the package 24 says don't take it longer than ten days, she did. And 25 despite the fact that the package in multiple places

1 says don't take more than recommended.

2 Now, the plaintiffs want to say here, and 3 their allegations are that she took only a therapeutic 4 does. But we have inconsistencies. On one hand, we 5 have the fact that the plaintiffs say that no one 6 specifically saw her take any pill or the number of 7 pills that she took. On the other hand, we have 8 documented evidence where the two sisters separately
9 filed insurance claims saying that she took an overdose
10 and if, in fact, she took an overdose, she clearly did 11 not follow the directions.

12 So I would suggest to Your Honor that there 13 is no way that the plaintiffs can establish that she 14 would have read and heeded a different language, 15 label.

16 Third, there's a requirement -- there's no 17 basis to say that a different warning would have 18 changed the outcome and, in fact, there's absolutely no 19 evidence to suggest that the outcome would have been 20 different or Ms. Hayes would not have died had there 21 been a different label there. There's simply no expert 22 testimony to that effect.

23 The plaintiffs try to fill that void again by 24 saying well, first, her sister wouldn't have bought the 25 Tylenol if there had been a different warning there.

1 But, Your Honor, with all respect, Ms. Hayes was a 2 competent adult.

3 There's no indication -- this is not a 4 parent/child relationship or anything like that, and 5 what the sister might or might not have done with all 6 due respect, doesn't supply the requisite degree of 7 proof.

8 Secondly, anything as I've said, that it 9 would suggest that she would have acted differently is 10 pure speculation at this point, and there's nothing 11 upon which you can base it off.

12 THE COURT: Was there a --

13 MS. JONES: I think --

14 THE COURT: Was there a --

15 MS. JONES: -- that --

16 THE COURT: -- deposition of the sister?

17 MS. JONES: I beg your pardon?

18 THE COURT: Was there a deposition of his 19 sister?

20 MS. JONES: Yes.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MS. JONES: Yes, Your Honor, there are 23 depositions of the sisters, and I believe that the 24 pertinent testimony is all attached as exhibits for 25 Your Honor.

1 THE COURT: Right.

2 MS. C. JONES: We'll certainly be happy to 3 supply those in the event that you need the entire 4 transcript rather than the portions that have been 5 talked about, Your Honor.

6 Now, we go back to -- I say finally, I think 7 it is clear that it's very difficult for the plaintiff 8 to meet the burden of the failure to warn. We have the 9 other issue of, frankly, preemption, and I would 10 suggest to Your Honor it's perhaps not necessary for 11 Your Honor to get there because I don't think the 12 plaintiffs can meet the burden of proof and can 13 establish evidence that would present a question of 14 fact for the Court.

15 But, there is at least the argument of 16 conflict preemption, opined preemption, applicable here 17 by virtue of the implementation of the final rule by 18 the FDA because the final rule of the FDA, even as the 19 plaintiffs' expert recognizes, mandates the use of 20 certain language here that was, in fact, implemented
21 before this Ms. Hayes death.

22 Even though we have, as we talked about in 23 the last argument, the issue of a savings cause on the 24 product liability issue, when you have a situation 25 where you have a federal law, and compliance with a

1 state law would require, if you would, a party to 2 violate a state law or a federal law then you, in fact, 3 have conflict preemption.

4 Better said, conflict preemption occurs where 5 it's impossible for a party to comply with both state 6 and federal law, and following the implementation of 7 the final rule in 2009.

8 McNeil was required to use the language with 9 respect to liver damage promulgated by the FDA. And 10 what the plaintiffs are suggesting here is that they 11 ought to use different language from that prescribed, 12 and with all due respect, I suggest, Your Honor, that 13 under Maryland versus Louisiana, that is a clear case 14 of conflict preemption that would preclude a successful 15 pursuit of a failure to warn claim under the final 16 rule.

17 I think that, just to be clear, although I 18 would have to say honestly to the Court there is some 19 question as to whether or not the bottle that Ms. Hayes 20 had had the warning from 2010 versus the final warning
21 label versus what had been voluntarily put on there 22 before by McNeil, there's one very little difference 23 between the two.

24 But, more important, under the circumstances 25 here where we don't have the bottle and where the

1 bottle was, in fact, disposed of by the plaintiffs, I
2 think we're entitled to the presumption that it's more 3 likely to have been the bottle that would have been in 4 effect in 2010 with the 2010 label which would, in 5 fact, have been the label under the final rule.

6 So I guess to just quickly wrap it up, I
7 would suggest to the Court that there's no showing that 8 there is a genuine issue or that the plaintiffs can 9 present a genuine issue in material fact as to the 10 adequacy of the label as to whether or not the decedent 11 would have read and heeded another label as to whether 12 some other warning would, in fact, have prevented her 13 injury, and that the plaintiffs cannot rely upon the 14 testimony of the sisters on supposition to bootstrap 15 an argument into suggesting that she would, in fact, 16 have read and heeded that.

17 And, for those reasons, there's no genuine 18 issue as to any material fact, and we believe that we 19 are entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law.

20 THE COURT: Thank you, Ms. Jones. Why don't 21 we take a break? It's 12:35. Can we be back at 1:45, 22 and then we will resume with arguments at that time.
23 Okay. Thank you.

24 ALL: Thank you, Your Honor.

25 (Luncheon recess, 12:36 p.m.)

1 AFTERNOON SESSION

2 1:52 p.m.

3 THE COURT: Please be seated. Mr. Tisi, good 4 afternoon.

5 MR. TISI: Good afternoon, Judge.

6 THE COURT: Whenever you're ready.

7 MR. TISI: Sure. For the record, my name is 8 Chris Tisi. I represent the plaintiffs in this case.
9 I think I'm the only one in the room who has not had an 10 opportunity to appear before you, so thank you very 11 much, and your staff as well.

12 There are really three issues before the 13 Court on the motion to dismiss for what we've called 14 failure to warn, but it's really failure to warn and 15 instruct on the proper use of the product.

16 The first is whether there is reasonable 17 evidence from which a jury could conclude in this case 18 that the 2009 Extra Strength Tylenol label, which 19 really is the label at issue in this case for a reason 20 that I will explain later, which says that an overdose 21 of acetaminophen can cause liver damage, however, that 22 is defined, adequately informed the plaintiff on the 23 risk and how to mitigate the risk.

24 The second issue is is there evidence from 25 which a jury can conclude that the appropriate warnings

1 and instructions would have changed the behavior of Ms.
2 Hayes and whether or not that was a proximate cause of 3 her liver failure and ultimate death.

4 And the third issue is whether or not 5 plaintiffs' claims for warnings and instructions were 6 impliedly preempted under federal law. Those are three 7 really big questions, Judge, and I apologize ahead of 8 time for the fact that I think we're going to have to 9 go through some evidence and some of the regulations 10 and all of that, and I apologize. It may take a little 11 bit longer than I had hoped.

12 I think to make it easier for the Court and 13 for the record, we've discussed over lunch that it may 14 be easy for us to break this apart and discuss with you 15 ahead of time two issues related to the regulatory 16 scheme and where acetaminophen fits in the 17 constellation of these regulations because I think it 18 can be a little bit confusing, and I think picking and 19 choosing different regulations might make it difficult 20 to really understand the 40-year history of this drug.

21 So, what Mr. Milling and I have decided to do 22 with your permission is to have Mr. Milling perhaps 23 come up and talk about two issues, the first being the 24 relationship between an OTC manufacturer of a drug and 25 the Food and Drug Administration under the FDA

1 regulatory scheme.

2 And the second issue is the current and 3 appropriate at the time and place that acetaminophen 4 fit within that regulatory scheme and what, frankly,
5 McNeil has done over time to change its label
6 repeatedly and voluntarily in order to try and address
7 certain issues and why we think that there was a 8 failure to do so in this case.

9 So, with your permission, I would like to be 10 able to maybe give some of my time to Mr. Milling, have 11 him go through, and then maybe rejoin you after he is 12 done.

13 THE COURT: That's fine.

14 MR. TISI: Thank you, sir.

15 THE COURT: Thank you.

16 MR. MILLING: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Good afternoon, Mr. Milling.

18 MR. MILLING: And, again, Clayton Milling,
19 for the record, for the plaintiffs. I was assigned 20 preemption, but I think what I would -- what I really 21 would like to be able to -- I think what the best use 22 of my time today is for me to cover preemption, but 23 cover it in with providing the Court an understanding 24 of the regulatory systems that are at play, what McNeil 25 has done and then, by inference, to show the Court that

1 they have not been -- there has not been any preemption 2 in this case.

3 To begin with, I'll just say that every court 4 that we could find in the country that has looked at a 5 case involving OTC Tylenol and OTC Motrin, both 6 manufactured by McNeil, has had this very motion filed 7 against them on preemption, including two in the 8 Eastern District of Pennsylvania from your colleagues, 9 the Wolf versus McNeil case and the Brown versus 10 Johnson and Johnson case, 2014. And every court that 11 has looked at this motion has determined that there is 12 no preemption.

13 That being said, the parties both agree in 14 their briefs that there is no express preemption about 15 the failure of warn, that the savings cost handles 16 that. So the issue is applied preemption, and with 17 implied preemption, as the Court knows, the issue is 18 there an impossibility?

19 Is there some sort of impossibility for 20 McNeil to, as some people say, worship both masters?
21 Can they handle their state court responsibilities for 22 their tort -- for tort claims while at the same time 23 handle their federal responsibilities pursuant to the 24 regulations and the answer, again, from every court 25 that has looked at it is yes.

1 Let me start by just simply noting for the 2 record, I think we've cited some cases, some Supreme 3 Court cases. I do not have this in my outline, but 4 since Mr. Tisi mentioned it, I will tell you that the 5 United States Supreme Court and all courts have 6 uniformly held that the manufacturer and not the FDA is 7 ultimately responsible for its label.

8 When you buy Tylenol it does not say FDA on 9 the label, it says McNeil on the label. And it is the 10 obligation of McNeil to warn of risk that are known and 11 knowable once it's -- as it is performing its pharmaco 12 vigilance, as it's looking at the various lines of 13 evidence, and if it determines that the risk profile of 14 this drug has changed over time or a new risk has 15 emerged.

16 Now, what I have done, and I have some 17 documents and I'll hand them to Your Honor for a 18 second, but I -- would it be okay if I move away from 19 the microphone to draw? I was asked to do this by my 20 colleagues.

21 THE COURT: Sure.

22 (Pause in proceedings.)

23 MR. MILLING: So at the top tell me -- maybe 24 I'll turn it this way. At the top, Your Honor, is the 25 FDA, and the FDA has many divisions within it. And the 1 two divisions that we're going to be talking about 2 today are completely separate divisions.

3 One is called monograph. It's actually 4 called the OTC, over-the-counter review. And the 5 second is called NDA, new drug application. And those 6 are two different regulatory pathways by which a drug 7 can be legally marketed in the United States. In this 8 case, McNeil has acetaminophen Tylenol products and has 9 always had acetaminophen Tylenol products in both 10 regulatory pathways.

11 There is a wall between these regulatory 12 pathways of the FDA, and if McNeil, for example, learns 13 of information and puts it in its annual report, that 14 information goes to the NDA department. It doesn't go 15 to the monographs department. So they're totally 16 separate.

17 So what happened in this case? In this case, 18 in 1975, McNeil filed documents with the FDA in the 19 form of a new drug application, and the FDA reviewed 20 McNeil's clinical documents, et cetera. It's not 21 really important.

22 Initially, they had a couple of questions but 23 eventually in 1979, the Extra Strength Tylenol was 24 approved, and when a drug is approved for NDA it's 25 approved as being safe and effective as labeled. And

1 NDA, Your Honor, is for an individual product, Extra 2 Strength Tylenol with a specific label that the FDA has 3 approved.

4 At the same time, backing up, going back to 5 the fifties, there was a system called DESI, drug -- 6 they were looking at old drugs, acetaminophen, old 7 ingredients, aspirin, Bufferin, all this kind of stuff, 8 and the government was trying to figure out what do we 9 do with these drugs that have been on the market for so 10 long and they're innocuous? They're in all of these 11 products.

12 And they created a system that they believed 13 at the time was going to be efficient called the 14 monograph system. In the monograph system, this review 15 would be a three-part process. And the three-part 16 process would be that initially a panel of, they call 17 them the legislation, qualified experts, would get 18 together and have meetings to discuss what they thought 19 was -- what they thought the safety profile of the drug 20 was, what they thought appropriate warnings should be, 21 what they thought appropriate doses should be, and they 22 would then write up to the FDA a proposal. And 23 that's -- I'll show -- we'll show -- I'll show you the 24 language.

25 Then, after the proposal is written, there's

1 time for comment, there's time for new data. McNeil
2 can always submit data as it's going along and edit.
3 The whole premise is that the stake-holders will 4 continually submit data so when we get to end game we 5 have the most current information.

6 So in 1977, there was a panel report,
7 acetaminophen, and that's terrible -- that's terrible, 8 I'm sorry. The panel report was filed. It said in 9 there -- the scientists said we believe that putting a 10 warning, in fact, it's the identical warning that went 11 on in 2009 that says severe liver damage may occur with 12 overdose is obligatory based on data in 1977. Time 13 passed. Eleven years passed.

14 1988, the government came in and issued a 15 tentative final monograph, and the tentative final 16 monograph is a lengthy document, I'm going to show it
17 to Your Honor in just a bit, and it goes through lots 18 of the comments that were made by various stake-holders 19 and ultimately says -- at the end it has about three 20 pages, it says "This is what we envision the monograph 21 to look like," and it gives a proposed monograph, which 22 is a cookbook.

23 But eventually -- what it is is it's going to 24 be a document in the code of federal regulations that 25 says if anybody, Milling Company, Stengel Company,

1 wants to sell acetaminophen, you don't have to get FDA 2 approval once there's a final monograph because all the 3 parameters of how you do the dose, the warnings, the 4 duration of use, everything has been solved and is 5 finished. As of today, as the Court is familiar, we're 6 still operating under a tentative final monograph.

7 Now, in 1998, Extra Strength Tylenol -- 8 McNeil wrote a letter to the FDA and said we want to 9 withdraw our NDA and we want to proceed under the 10 tentative final monograph.

11 There is no more NDA for acetaminophen, but 12 NDA has a number, and when you file a document which is 13 kind of -- it took me a while to understand, to an NDA
14 you write -- just like you write a case number, the NDA 15 number, blah, blah, blah, and it goes into that file.
16 You cannot file a document to the Extra Strength
17 Tylenol NDA because it doesn't exist anymore.

18 What does exist in NDA though is Extended
19 Release Tylenol. So the signa, the longer duration 20 Tylenol was never contemplated on the market, so we 21 have now extra strength and extended release and all of 22 the other Tylenol products but, again, McNeil has an 23 NDA and it has a monograph. Make sense?

24 McNeil files all of its adverse event
25 reports, all of its annual reports, to this NDA because

1 that's required. It does not file it to the monograph.
2 Everything that McNeil files to the monograph, 3 incidentally, is public.

4 Everything McNeil files to the NDA is 5 completely private. So one of the things that the jury 6 is going to be hearing about over the course of the 7 trial is well, if the N -- when the -- when the 8 regulators make certain rules what information had 9 McNeil provided to the monograph, and the jury will be 10 learning about that.

11 So, recognizing that we have an NDA and a 12 monograph, we go back to when Extra Strength Tylenol 13 was an NDA. The question for preemption and the 14 question for warnings at the core is can McNeil
15 voluntarily make changes to enhance its warnings 16 without being forced to do so by the FDA and without 17 the FDA saying no, in other words, preemption? And if 18 we start -- here's -- I may not need all these 19 documents because -- Your Honor, may I approach?

20 THE COURT: Yes.

21 (Pause in proceedings.)

22 THE COURT: Thank you.

23 MR. MILLING: So, this is a 1994 document and 24 it is written to the Extra Strength Tylenol NDA because 25 in 1994, Extra Strength Tylenol was still an NDA

1 product.

2 And it is a special supplement changes being 3 effected, and it is saying to the FDA under, "Changes
4 being effected regulation, 'We are taking these steps
5 on our own to change our label for this NDA product.'"

6 And then if the Court will look at the last 7 page of the document, the third page, then this is -- 8 this will be important later, it's in the second 9 paragraph it says, "If the attached" -- "As the 10 attached letter to Dr. Weintraub indicates, we're also 11 incorporating these same revisions in the labeling for 12 all adult Tylenol acetaminophen-containing products in 13 the monograph."

14 So what happened, Your Honor, was in 1994, 15 they said we're going to use this "Changes being 16 effected" way, we're going to make changes here in the 17 NDA, but we're going to tell the FDA hey, because we 18 have products over here we want our labels to be 19 consistent, and that's what they did.

20 "Changes being effected" in the NDA setting 21 is a way in which companies make changes voluntarily.
22 As the court in Wyeth versus Levine said, "Generally 23 speaking, a manufacturer may only change a drug label
24 after FDA approval of a supplement application. There 25 is, however, an FDA regulation that permits a

1 manufacturer to make certain changes to its label," 2 here is the keywords, "before receiving the agency's 3 approval."

4 "Among other things those changes being 5 effected," the letter that I just showed you, "provides 6 that a manufacturer is changing to the label to add or 7 strengthen a contradiction, warning, precaution, or 8 adverse event, and it may take the labeling change upon 9 the filing of the supplement application with the FDA.
10 It need not wait for FDA approval." That's what McNeil
11 did and that's the procedure they used under the NDA.

12 In fact, if you go to the next document,
13 McNeil advertised to the world, we have voluntarily --
14 Tylenol urges the industry to follow us on voluntarily 15 changing our label to add alcohol. Question for 16 preemption, question for this case, can the company 17 make voluntary changes, absolutely.

18 Third document, this is interesting because 19 it's 2001. Are you with -- this is the letter to Dr.
20 Ganley.

21 THE COURT: Dr. Ganley, all right.

22 MR. MILLING: All right. And the reason that 23 I point out 2001, Your Honor, is because I'm -- we got 24 to go back over here. In 2001, Extra Strength Tylenol 25 is no longer in the NDA. It is a monograph drug, and

1 the number, the NDA number at the top has changed.

2 And so here, McNeil is making it, "That 3 changes being effected," if you'll look right over 4 here, "to its extended release product under the NDA," 5 and then it says on the second page, I have it 6 highlighted for you, "These same changes will be made 7 to other Tylenol products of the monograph."

8 So we are going to make our change over here 9 and then we're going to bring it across to the 10 monograph. And, again, that was perfectly admiss -- 11 perfectly permissible and it was accepted.

12 Now, so now let me change. That's how you -- 13 that -- this "Change is being effected," Your Honor, is 14 a regulation that we'll look at a little bit, 314.70, 15 but that regulation, again, allows McNeil to make the 16 change voluntarily under the NDA.

17 Now, let's move to the monograph, and the 18 next document is the document 21 CFR Section 330.10.
19 This is the statute that creates the monograph system.
20 It reads, "For purposes of classifying over-the-counter 21 drugs as generally recognized among qualified experts 22 as safe and effective for use and not misbranded, the 23 following regulations shall apply."

24 Now, I've highlighted for Your Honor on the 25 first page the commissioner's advisory report followed

1 by, on about the fourth page or fifth page, actually,
2 further than that, the seventh page, the tentative 3 final monograph.

4 And then if you'll look at page eight, and 5 this may be a little bit of aside and nuance, but it's 6 something that's come up in motions and has been talked 7 about, it says in paragraph nine, "Final monograph.
8 After reviewing the objections, the entire 9 administration record including all new data," again, 10 the concept of McNeil and other submitting data to the 11 monograph, "and information and comments, and 12 considering the arguments made at any oral hearing, the 13 commissioner shall publish in the Federal Register a 14 final order containing a monograph establishing 15 conditions under which a category of OTC drugs or 16 specific OTC drugs are generally recognized as safe and 17 effective and not misbranded. The monographs shall 18 become effective as specified in the order."

19 As of today, there is no final monograph for 20 acetaminophen. I'll talk about the final labeling
21 rule, and we should note that this is in Section 330, 22 and, eventually, you'll see the labeling rules in 23 Section 201 because it's not a monograph, it's a 24 labeling rule.

25 So that's the procedure. In 1988 the next

1 document is the tentative final monograph. And, as you
2 can see at the top of it that I have it says, "The 3 action is a notice of proposed rule-making." And it 4 says, "Summary: The Food and Drug Administration is 5 issuing a notice of proposed rule-making in the form of 6 a tentative final monograph that would establish 7 conditions for a drug to be generally recognized and 8 effective."

9 Over on the right-hand column, the legal 10 status of this document is given. "In order to confirm 11 the terminology used in the OTC drug review 12 regulations," and it cites 330.10, the one we just 13 looked at, "the present document is designated as a 14 tentative final monograph. It's legal status, however, 15 is that of a proposed rule."

16 Your Honor, this is not a law, this is not a 17 regulation, this is a proposal. And so then the 18 question becomes from 1988, we know that Extra Strength
19 Tylenol is operating under the tentative final 20 monograph, can McNeil voluntarily change their label if 21 they determine that there's a signal of safety? Can 22 they change their dosing regimen? Can they change 23 the -- lower the maximum daily dose, all of the things 24 we have talked about? The answer is unquestionably 25 yes.

1 The next document is a letter to Mr. Gainer
2 actually, who spoke this morning, from the FDA. "When 3 McNeil changed its dose, maximum daily dose, from four 4 grams per day to three grams per day in 2011, after Ms.
5 Hayes died, Mr. Gainer wrote a FOIA request to the FDA 6 and said please send me all the documents relating to 7 this change. And the FDA wrote back and said, "Extra 8 Strength Tylenol is marketed under the IAAA tentative 9 final monograph. Under a tentative final monograph 10 manufacturer's market products at their own risks and 11 are able to make voluntary adjustments taking into 12 account the information presented in the proposed TFM.
13 McNeil's voluntary act to reduce the maximum daily 14 dose is a measure that can be commonly taken by 15 over-the-counter TFMs."

16 The FDA says of course you can do it. It's 17 just a proposed rule. It's your discretion. You 18 market this at your own risk, and as long as you stay 19 within the borders and the confines of generally what's 20 in the proposal, we're not going to take any regulatory 21 action against you. And, in fact, once again, Your 22 Honor, McNeil wrote a letter to doctors and said look, 23 we voluntarily reduce the dose. There's no preemption.

24 If that's not clear enough, I believe in the 25 tutorial I stated or showed you a slide of their -- of 1 their own witnesses. Dr. Anthony Temple testified, "I 2 agree the language is consistent with what's in the 3 regulations. Agency approvals not needed."

4 Your Honor, we have an expert, Gerald 5 Rationale (ph), who's been challenged as a Daubert, but 6 he actually wrote the tentative final monograph that 7 we're dealing with and can comment on how this process 8 works.

9 Even the defense expert conceded, of course, 10 under the tentative final monograph, which only has the 11 force of law to propose rule, you can change the label 12 to increase your warnings if you believe it's 13 appropriate to do so.

14 Now, I want to step back for a second and 15 talk about policy. The FDA encourages manufacturers in 16 many different ways to make changes, and it lays out 17 various standards in various places in the regulations, 18 but they are all designed to do one thing, make sure 19 that the consumer comes first, that safety comes first, 20 and that important information on life-threatening 21 illnesses are not being withheld from consumers.

22 One thing you will not find, and Ms. Jones 23 indicated that we had cited a section in the 24 regulations that applies to prescription drugs, and 25 I'll get to that in a second, but the bigger point is

1 you will not find, as Ms. Jones has not stated and it
2 is not in the regulations, and I think it's intuitive, 3 but there will be nobody that will ever say that the 4 standard before a company has to warn is 100 percent 5 proof of causation.

6 In fact, there have been drugs taken off the 7 market for three adverse events of serious crazy
8 illnesses without any proof of causation. The standard 9 for warning is far less than causation, and there's no 10 regulation that says that.

11 If we look at the next document, we started 12 with 330.10 and then -- which is the -- how the 13 monograph system works. We're now at 330.12, "Status 14 of "Over-the Counter Drugs Previously Reviewed Under 15 DESI," that's acetaminophen.

16 And if you go to the second page, I've 17 highlighted for you at the bottom that kind of goes on 18 to the following page. It says, "Manufacturers and 19 distributors should take notice that the information on 20 OTC drugs provided by drug efficacy study," that's the 21 DESI review, "is valuable information as to 22 deficiencies in the data available to support 23 indications for use. They," manufacturers, "are 24 encouraged to perform studies to obtain adequate 25 evidence of effectiveness for the review of OTC drugs

1 which is already in process." That's the monograph 2 process.

3 It goes on to say, "In the interim, while 4 you're in the monograph process, it is in the public
5 interest that manufacturers and distributors of all OTC 6 drugs affect changes in their formulations," think 7 about our case, "and/or labeling to bring the products 8 into conformity with current medical knowledge and 9 experience."

10 That's what the regulations says, a general 11 expectation of the FDA for drugs that are in the 12 process. Bring your product if you -- up to the 13 science that you know is available either through 14 formulations, which we know McNeil has been involved 15 in, or through label changes.

16 Then it goes on, and I don't know if I 17 highlighted yours, but it goes on to talk about the 18 fact that manufacturers may be reluctant to make 19 changes because they make changes.

20 The FDA may come after them and say you have 21 actually created a new drug, and they may take a 22 regulatory action against the FDA. Does that make 23 sense?

24 But, what these paragraphs say is 25 "Manufacturers may be reluctant to take these changes

1 because they might lose their so-called grandfathered
2 status under the monograph."

3 It says, "To encourage and facilitate prompt 4 changes, the Food and Drug Administration will not take 5 legal action against any OTC drug other than those not 6 deferred based on the charge that the product is a new 7 drug, maybe with an antidote put it in, and not 8 grandfathered as a result of the changes in formulation 9 or labeling," and it tells you the kind.

10 It says that "The addition of labeling, 11 number one, or warnings, we're not going to take any 12 regulatory action if you add that to your product if 13 you think it's appropriate."

14 Number two, "Changes in the component, or 15 composition of the drug, we're not going to take any 16 regulatory action if you find that you can make a 17 better and safer product and you do it."

18 Number three, "Changes in the components or 19 composition of the drug which may reasonably be 20 included to improve the safety of the drug." In other 21 words, the policy behind the monograph system is please 22 make changes, we want you to make changes, we know 23 there's no final monograph yet.

24 Now, we've now shown Your Honor that McNeil
25 has made voluntary changes under the NDA, they can.

1 They've made voluntary changes under the monograph,
2 they can.

3 And I just want to take a second and address 4 something that Ms. Jones said today, which is that the 5 plaintiffs put a standard in their brief that was 6 incorrect. Now, if you can tell, I'm working my way
7 through these documents, so that's good. I apologize.

8 The regulation that is in front of you, the 9 next document, is 21 CFR 201.57 and, actually, before 10 we get there, is there a way, Your Honor, for you to go 11 back to the very first document that we skipped?

12 THE COURT: Which is what?

13 MR. MILLING: It is 21 CFR 314.70. It was at 14 the top of the stack.

15 THE COURT: Right.

16 MR. MILLING: 21 314.70 is the regulation on 17 how to do a "Changes being effected," for how to do a 18 CBE. In fact, it's kind of interesting. I read to you 19 -- may I approach, Your Honor?

20 THE COURT: Yes.

21 MR. MILLING: I read to you from the Wyeth
22 case. It's in our brief. But after the Wyeth decision 23 explained what a "Changes being effected" was, it cited 24 314.70 C63, so that's the -- that's what we're now 25 going to look at, 314.70.

1 THE COURT: And what page are you in your 2 brief?

3 MR. MILLING: I'm on page 51.

4 (Pause in proceedings.)

5 MR. MILLING: And 314.70 is entitled 6 "Supplements and Other Changes to Approved
7 Applications." So here we are with an NDA, an approved 8 application, and this is the regulation that says if 9 you want to do a change like the CBE that we saw them 10 do, you go to 314.70.

11 And if you go to 3.70, you go to the third
12 page, you'll see a little c, just as The Supreme Court 13 noted, and if you go to the fourth page, I've 14 highlighted number six, which is where The Supreme 15 Court noted, and this is the "changes being effected."

16 It says six, it says, "The agency may 17 designate a category of changes for the purpose of 18 providing that in the case of a change in such 19 category, the holder of an approved application, like 20 McNeil, may commence distribution of the drug product 21 involved upon receipt by the agency of a supplement to 22 the change." In other words, once we get the letter, 23 you can start distributing the product.

24 Number three, as the Court said, "Change in 25 the label to reflect newly acquired information to

1 accomplish any of the following," and this is what they 2 were doing, they were increasing the warnings, "A, to 3 add or strengthen a contraindication, warning, 4 precaution, or adverse reaction for which the evidence 5 of a causal association satisfies the standard for 6 including in the label under 201.57."

7 So this is a little complicated, but I'm 8 trying to explain why Ms. Jones accused us of giving 9 the wrong standard. This "Changes being effected" 10 regulation says go check out Section 201.57 for the 11 standard. Does that make sense?

12 And the next document I have for you 201.57, 13 and it is the prescription drug standard, but that's 14 the only place where standards are -- this particular 15 standard is.

16 And if we look at 201.57 on the sixth page of 17 the document, "Warnings and Precautions," "This 18 section must describe clinically significant adverse 19 reactions, including any that are potential fatal," 20 acute liver failure, "are serious," acute liver 21 failure, "even if infrequent or can be prevented by 22 mitigation through appropriate use of the drug."

23 Going down to about the middle of the 24 paragraph, it says, "In accordance with 314.70," which 25 we just looked at, "warning" -- of this chapter, "the

1 labeling must be revised to include a warning about 2 clinically significant hazard as soon as there is 3 reasonable evidence of a causal association with the 4 drug, a causal relationship need not have been 5 established."

6 Now, we got called out this morning because I
7 cited or our team cited the next document in your stack 8 which is 201.80. 201.80, Your Honor, respectfully, is 9 the new version of 201.57. And if you look at 201.80
10 on the third page --

11 (Pause in proceedings.)

12 MR. MILLING: If you look at 201.80 on the 13 third page under "Warnings," this is what we cited in 14 our brief. "Under this section, labeling shall 15 describe serious adverse reactions and potential safety 16 hazards, limitations, and use by them and steps should 17 be taken if they occur.

18 "The labeling shall be revised to include a 19 warning as soon as there is a reasonable evidence of an 20 association of a serious hazard with a drug. A causal 21 relationship need not have been proved." The point of 22 me going through this, Your Honor, is to say there are 23 various standards out there.

24 But, if you go to the NDA standard by which 25 McNeil makes changes, it guides you to the standard for

1 prescription drugs and it says you don't wait for 2 causation, and that's why we cited that in our brief, 3 and that's why what the jury is going to be listening 4 to on the warnings issue is number one, under the 5 regulations, has McNeil apprised consumers of the 6 current state of its knowledge, whether it be through 7 warnings or redoing the product, as we looked at in the 8 CFR, Section 330.12.

9 Or has McNeil -- did McNeil -- does the 10 evidence support this in association with a life
11 threatening condition such that it should be warned 12 about, because what I have heard multiple times, 13 respectfully, in the court is a discussion of 14 causation.

15 Causation, specific causation is the second 16 question in this case. The first question is was the 17 warning appropriate. We now know they can warn. Now 18 I've tried to provide some context for when you warn.

19 In fact, I next -- next, I have a quote from 20 the defense expert because I was called out or we were 21 called out that this was the wrong standard, and I said
22 doesn't 201.80 in the Code of Federal Regulations talk, 23 and I walked through the standard.

24 I said, "Are you familiar with that 25 language?" And she said, "Yes, I am." I said, "Isn't

1 that the standard for when a warning should be place on 2 an NDA drug as promulgated by a government?

3 "Answer, "It's in the regulation. That's 4 what the regulation says."

5 "Thank you. So to be clear for our judge and 6 jury as it relates to NDA products, a pharmaceutical 7 company has to put warnings on it as soon as there's 8 reasonable evidence of association. They are not 9 allowed to wait until causation is proved, true?

10 "Witness: That's what the regulations say."

11 Question down at the bottom, "The regulations 12 of law?

13 "Answer: Yes."

14 I'm going to do one more thing and I'm going 15 to talk about Ms. Jones' comment about malnutrition and 16 then I'm going to talk about the final rule.
17 Malnutrition, Ms. Jones says that in 2009 -- well, I'll 18 back up.

19 (Pause in proceedings.)

20 MR. MILLING: Ms. Jones says that there is 21 the applied preemption because in 2009, even though at 22 any time from 1980 up until 2009, McNeil could have 23 warned, could have changed the dose, could have done 24 whatever they want.

25 In 2009, a final rule came out that said use

1 the word, "severe liver damage." This is very 2 (indiscernible). Why did they choose the language, 3 "severe liver damage"? They did it because that's the 4 exact language that came in the '77 monograph. The FDA
5 was confined to the monograph system. The warning that 6 the FDA said put on in 2009 is the same warning that 7 was recommended in 1977.

8 McNeil could have put on a higher warning at 9 any time voluntarily between those dates. McNeil could 10 have lowered the dose like it did at any time. But it 11 didn't. And, in fact, it disagreed with the proposed 12 putting "severe" on by saying we don't want the word, 13 "severe," but the FDA insisted on "severe."

14 But, here's the kicker. Just because the FDA
15 says that you have to put this label on doesn't mean 16 you can't put more. Right above 330.12 that I've got 17 in your packet is 330.11 called an NDA deviation.

18 That's the procedure you go through if you
19 say you know what, you've given me a rule, FDA, but I 20 want to do more than your rule. I don't think severe 21 liver damage, even that, really tells people that they 22 can die, that they could have a liver failure, like our 23 prescription drug does, like the American Association 24 for the Study of Liver Disease recommended, like the 25 FDA scientist recommended. I want to do more. You can

1 always do more. The FDA's regulation creates a floor, 2 not a ceiling, and there are regulatory mechanisms for 3 doing it.

4 As it relates to the issue of fasting,
5 McNeil's brief is pretty aggressive, and it says "The 6 FDA rejected fasting." And Ms. Jones referred to you
7 to page 19397 of the 2009 rule, and I want to refer you 8 to the next page, 19398. Your Honor, fasting has been 9 around in malnutrition.

10 THE COURT: Well, where are you?

11 MR. MILLING: It's been around --

12 THE COURT: Where are you?

13 MR. MILLING: I'm on the last document, the 14 2009 rule. I'm sorry. How long ago did I lose you?

15 THE COURT: And what page?

17 THE COURT: 19397?

18 MR. MILLING: 19398.

19 THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

20 MR. MILLING: All right. To set the -- to 21 set the stage, in 2006, three years before this 22 document came out, Your Honor, the FDA issued a notice 23 of proposed rule making, and it asked for comments from 24 stake-holders about various things, about increasing 25 the warning to severe, about putting a warning on for

1 malnutrition, about what the maximum daily dose should 2 be, about a lot of things.

3 And in response to that 2006 notice, that's 4 where the American Association for the Study of Liver 5 Disease responded. It said we agree with the FDA and, 6 in fact, we think that the label should say liver 7 failure, death, et cetera. McNeil wrote in and said we 8 disagree with the FDA, it should not say severe.

9 In 2009, because McNeil had not done anything
10 to its warning other than say liver damage, the FDA
11 said we're going to require liver warning, but it said 12 we're not going to require fasting. And the way the 13 defense has characterized it is that the FDA rejected 14 fasting, therefore, creating preemption, but it's not 15 the case.

16 In this Federal Register, what the Court will 17 see, and I don't want to go through it, but I'll just 18 tell you, there were only three documents turned into 19 the FDA on the issue of fasting with the total on 20 page -- of nine cases.

21 And the part that I've highlighted for you 22 say, "The submitted data are not sufficient to conclude 23 that acetaminophen used a daily OTC doses by 24 malnourished individuals poses additional risk of liver 25 injury in these individuals.

1 "Therefore, we are not requiring any warning
2 for these individuals," and here's the part the defense 3 has not read, "at this time. If new data becomes 4 available, we will reconsider our position on this 5 issue."

6 The FDA has never said you cannot put a 7 warning on for malnutrition. The ASLD recommended in 8 2006, and this document is premised only on three 9 submissions. Malnutrition first came I think 1987 I
10 want to say with an article by Wickman Block (ph).
11 It's been discussed for a long time.

12 And the jury, if we get into this issue, will 13 see whether or not McNeil turned in all the articles 14 they have in their database on malnutrition to the 15 monograph system.

16 I'm not going to -- I don't want to tell 17 anybody what the evidence is, but only three 18 submissions came in on fasting, and they said we don't 19 have enough data to make a decision, but there's no 20 implied preemption.

21 Your Honor, what I've tried to do today is 22 say number one, this is the regulatory scheme. I hope 23 it wasn't too crazy. On both sides of the ledger, 24 McNeil has exercised the way -- has exercised its 25 option and its regulatory ability to say we want to 1 make changes without FDA approval.

2 The FDA has never stood in the way of any 3 approval, and even in 2011, McNeil voluntarily reduced
4 the dose. There is no implied preemption. No court 5 has ever found implied preemption, and with that 6 lengthy setting of the table, I'll now have Mr. Tisi, 7 ask him to come up and talk about the genuine issues of 8 material fact on the warnings claim.

9 THE COURT: Thank you.

10 MR. MILLING: Thank you, sir.

11 (Pause in proceedings.)

12 MR. TISI: Thank you, Judge. If you would 13 give me a moment to get organized here?

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 (Pause in proceedings.)

16 MR. TISI: To give you a sense of where I 17 expect to go over the completion of the argument, 18 Judge, I want to talk to you a little bit about what 19 was happening with acetaminophen against the backdrop
20 that Mr. Milling was talking about and talked to you 21 about before, what the evidence is with respect to Ms.
22 Hayes, and what her expert testimony is going to be 23 with respect to the inadequacy of the warnings in this 24 case.

25 But, before I do, I just want to make a

1 couple of observations, if you would indulge me on 2 that. At its core, the defendant's claim is that what 3 was happening against the backdrop of this regulatory 4 scheme is irrelevant.

5 It's irrelevant what the American Association
6 for the Study of Liver Disease said, it's irrelevant
7 what the FDA Working Group, which was a group of FDA 8 scientists reporting to the CDR, the director of the 9 Center for Disease and Research portion that covers 10 drugs in this country. It's irrelevant what the 11 scientist was saying. The only thing that's relevant 12 is what's in their files, what they -- what they did, 13 and what the FDA required them to do under the 14 monograph system.

15 Now, juxtaposed against that, Judge, is in 16 almost every pharmaceutical case that I know I have 17 been involved with and there is a lot of experience in 18 this room, what typically happens is an expert gets on 19 the stand and learned counsel for the defense gets up
20 and says to the expert, Mr. or Dr. expert, how come you 21 are the only one in the world who has figured this out?
22 Nobody has else has figured out what you're now telling 23 the jury. The FDA didn't do it, the scientists didn't 24 do it, nobody did it, okay?

25 And, in that circumstance, the expert has to

1 explain why they came to a conclusion with the benefit
2 of hindsight that all the other scientists in the world
3 didn't figure out?

4 Here, uniquely among cases at least I have 5 been involved with, we have the opposite situation. We 6 have a situation where the experts will get on the 7 stand and their witnesses will agree in almost every 8 instance that this was not a legitimate debate within 9 the medical and scientific community. This was a 10 debate between McNeil and the scientific community.

11 Who represents that scientific community?
12 The American Association for the Study of Liver
13 Diseases. Scientists like our experts, Dr. Caploids 14 (ph), and Dr. Darren (ph), who published at the time in 15 this area. The Food and Drug Administration, who had 16 not one but two medical advisory committees in the 17 2000s in order to try and bring these issues out in the 18 public.

19 An almost unprecedented group of scientists 20 who were pulled together by the director of the 21 advisory who said look, tell us what you think. You 22 review the science and you tell us what you think.

23 So, now because we have a situation where 24 almost all of the scientific and medical community has 25 lined up against McNeil, they have taken the position

1 in saying well, we don't need to look at what was going 2 on outside.

3 Well, let's look at what the FDA actually 4 said. In 2006, and I believe you have the document in 5 front of you. In fact, can you bring up the box right 6 here?

7 This, Judge, I will refer to you is the 8 December 26th, 2006 proposed rule by the Food and Drug 9 Administration published in the Federal Registry, 10 volume 71247, and I believe it's Exhibit 8 to our 11 opposition for motion for summary judgment. May I 12 approach, Judge?

13 THE COURT: Yes.

14 (Pause in proceedings.)

15 THE COURT: Thank you.

16 (Pause in proceedings.)

17 MR. TISI: After reviewing -- and just to put 18 this in context, in 2002, the FDA held a medical 19 advisory committee meeting, and maybe I ought to back 20 up for a moment and talk a little bit about what that 21 is.

22 When there are scientific issues that come up 23 that are -- that are -- that require input, sometimes 24 the FDA reviews it internally, but sometimes what they 25 do is they bring together outside advisors, and then

1 they have the various stake-holders, companies, 2 scientists come and present, and the FDA actually 3 presents, and then sometimes they meet and try to have 4 a consensus about what needs to be done on the 5 particular issue going forward.

6 There was a 2002 advisory committee talking
7 about the issue of acetaminophen toxicity, which I
8 think we described in our brief as being a serious 9 public health issue because of the number of deaths, 10 transplants, hospitalizations that were due each year
11 to acetaminophen, which I will remind the Court, I'm 12 sure you've heard this several times, exceeds all other 13 causes of liver failure combined, this one drug.

14 So after that, the FDA issued a proposed rule 15 and that's what you have in front of you. And on 16 page -- after reviewing what happened at the 2002
17 advisory committee, the FDA on page 77329 says this,

18 "The FDA believes that these data support the 19 previous advisory committee conclusion that 20 acetaminophen hepatotoxicity is an important public 21 health consideration and that additional labeling is 22 necessary for it to continue to be recognized as safe 23 and effective."

24 I want to pause for a second because what it 25 doesn't say is acetaminophen overdose, it doesn't say

1 acetaminophen suicide, it doesn't say -- it makes the 2 broad statement that there are -- yes, I wouldn't deny 3 that there are -- that there was a problem with 4 overdose and there's a problem with suicide.

5 But, within the data that they reviewed,
6 there are cases with people who had been fasting, there 7 are cases of people at four grams or less, there are 8 cases of people who took it in combination with other 9 drugs. And what the -- what the FDA was saying was we 10 have a very serious public health issue here that needs 11 to be addressed in part with labeling and instructions, 12 and that's what they said.

13 So what happened against the backdrop of 14 that? The next thing that happened, Judge, is the 15 American Association for the Study of Liver Diseases 16 looked at this and said you know something, this is 17 something -- we represent thousands of hepatologists 18 throughout the country.

19 We want our -- we want our -- just like the 20 American Cancer Society, American College of Radiology, 21 American College of Pediatrics, they weigh on issues 22 that are important to them, they took this issue and 23 they wrote a proposal to the FDA, and they said we 24 have, as the hepatology community, reviewed the 25 evidence and we believe that certain things need to be

1 done. We have described what the -- excuse me.

2 (Pause in proceedings.)

3 MR. TISI: May I approach, Judge?

4 THE COURT: Sure.

5 (Pause in proceedings.)

6 THE COURT: Thank you.

7 MR. TISI: In response to this formal 8 request, the American Association for the Study of 9 Liver Diseases issued a position paper that it filed 10 with the United States government, and you'll see this 11 from the record as you review, it went to the board of 12 directors for the ASD, and what did they recommend?

13 Well, the first thing they did was they said, 14 "The ASD fully" -- paragraph two, "is fully supportive 15 of the agency's conclusion that acetaminophen
16 hepatotoxicity is an important public health
17 consideration and that additional labeling is necessary 18 for the drug to continue to be generally recognized 19 safe and effective." That's the exact same language I 20 just read to you from the Federal Registry -- Federal 21 Register.

22 So now you have the FDA and the medical 23 community that looks at this stuff saying this drug as 24 labeled in 2006, 2007, is not recognized -- does not 25 communicating what people need to know in order to use

1 the drug safely.

2 Now, let me just back up for a second because 3 the label that they're talking about is, in fact, the 4 label that's in issue in this case and I'll demonstrate 5 that to you in a moment.

6 But, among the things that the -- that the 7 ALSD did is in paragraph three on page two. It says -- 8 it says that a warning -- it proposes an actual 9 warning.

10 And, again, this is not hindsight, this isn't 11 cherry picking, this isn't plaintiff's experts getting 12 up there and saying gee, you know, we have something 13 that's wild-eyed and we just, you know, made up coming 14 into court.

15 They looked -- they looked at the evidence in 16 real time and they said this product can cause severe 17 and even fatal liver injury, something that was not on 18 the label at the time. The chance is higher if you 19 have certain things.

20 Number one, you use this drug at the maximum 21 recommended dose, four grams a day, for five or more 22 consecutive days. They're saying you can have risk at 23 the high -- the recommended dose.

24 If you go down, it says, the fourth one, you 25 use this drug when water or food intake is restricted

1 and prohibited. It goes on to say on paragraph four -- 2 excuse me -- and it says some other things that may be 3 relevant in other context, but in this case, those are 4 the big -- those are the big issues. They go on to say 5 at the bottom of this page it says "There is a very 6 narrow therapeutic to toxic ratio for this drug."

7 Now, I want to stop there for a moment. This 8 issue of margin of safety is a really important issue 9 with respect to this case. If you look back for 40 10 years, the issue of margin of safety is an issue that 11 has been wrestled with in the medical and scientific 12 community because particularly the over-the-counter 13 drug, you need to make sure you have enough space 14 between the maximum therapeutic dose, the amount that's 15 going to hurt you, and the dose that's going to -- that 16 can cause you harm. And so this issue of what is the 17 difference between the two is and always has been an 18 issue with acetaminophen.

19 So what they suggest is it might be 20 reasonable to lower the dose from four grams to three 21 grams. And, again, this is three years before Ms.
22 Hayes ever took her acetaminophen.

23 The next thing that happened, Judge, is that 24 other people, including the Food and Drug 25 Administration, wanted to take a look at this, and so

1 what they did is they pulled together a group of 2 scientists at the Food and Drug Administration.

3 And by the way, Judge, all these documents 4 were submitted to McNeil. McNeil knew about all of 5 these things. This wasn't something that was hidden 6 under a rock some place. This was actively provided to 7 McNeil with the hopes that they would make these 8 changes, frankly.

9 The next issue was following the 2006
10 proposed rule, the FDA commissioner for this CDR branch 11 that governs pharmaceutical drugs said let's get some 12 of our best and brightest scientists together and look 13 at the data.

14 By the way, many -- all of this data is data 15 our experts have been looking at as well. They 16 independently looked at this data. But one of the 17 things that experts typically do is not only look at 18 the data, but look at what are people saying about the 19 data at the time? This would be one of those things.
20 And they issued a report by the -- which has been 21 euphemistically called the working group report, and 22 it's Exhibit Number 8 to our --

23 (Pause in proceedings.)

24 MR. TISI: It's Exhibit Number 8 to our 25 brief.

1 THE COURT: We have the working group report,
2 do we not?

3 MR. TISI: I do have it with me and I'm 4 giving it to you.

5 THE COURT: Melissa, do we have that? Yes.

6 MR. TISI: Okay. You don't need a copy?

7 THE COURT: You can just refer to it.

8 MR. TISI: So the point is that the -- that 9 the working group made certain proposals, but some of 10 the things that they found were very -- were very 11 important, including, and I'll just make some 12 statements here that -- reading directly from the 13 working group report.

14 It said, "Acetaminophen has a narrow 15 therapeutic margin and there's little difference 16 between the current maximum recommended dose of 17 acetaminophen and doses that are associated with a 18 potentially elevated risk of hepatotoxicity."

19 Also, they concluded -- with respect to 20 warnings and instructions, they made these follow 21 conclusions. "Number one, consumers perceive that 22 over-the-counter medications are extremely safe and not 23 likely to lead to serious toxicity. The marketing of 24 over-the-counter drugs emphasizes safety and the 25 perception may be reinforced by the availability of 1 package sizes with large numbers of pills."

2 Again, there was no drug that was more 3 aggressively marketed over the past decades than 4 Tylenol, Extra Strength Tylenol. It comes in packages
5 of -- Ms. Hayes bought a package that had 100 tablets 6 in it.

7 Number two, they said, "Consumers are not 8 aware that acetaminophen can cause serious liver 9 injury, in part because the product labels do not 10 adequately warn of the problem."

11 Judge, this is in real time what people 12 looking at the evidence were seeing. So this idea of 13 warning about liver damage, what they're finding is 14 that that doesn't tell people very much.

15 Number five, and this is all from page five 16 of the document, "Consumers are not aware" -- I'm 17 sorry. "Some populations may be more susceptible to 18 hepatic injury."

19 They also say that patients may take more 20 than they -- than is on the package, and that's 21 foreseeable because that may reflect a lack of 22 knowledge that acetaminophen can be toxic to the liver 23 and that other products may also contain acetaminophen.

24 So they made very specific regulations,
25 including change the label because the label wasn't

1 good enough, and they added -- they said warnings and 2 instructions need to be added in order to use the drug 3 safely, among them, lower the dose from four grams to 4 something less than four grams.

5 Number two, lower the individual dose, how 6 much you can take at one time. They recommended -- 7 and, in fact, this had really implications for this 8 case because if followed through, this would remove 9 Extra Strength Tylenol as an issue in favor of the 10 alternative, which is regular strength Tylenol, from 11 1,000 milligrams a day, which is two tablets of Extra 12 Strength Tylenol, to 650 milligrams, which is two 13 tablets of regular strength Tylenol.

14 The point is, Judge, by the mid-2000s, there 15 was a crystallization of thought in the medical, 16 scientific, and regulatory community that this was a 17 serious, serious public health issue that needed to be 18 addressed and that consumers like Ms. Hayes were not 19 getting the information on the risk and how to reduce 20 the risk.

21 (Pause in proceedings.)

22 MR. TISI: Now, Mr. Milling went through a 23 lot of discussions about the regulatory scheme, and 24 what I hoped to really do was to graft upon that, that 25 there are genuine issues of material fact that not only

1 could they change the label to add additional warnings
2 and instructions, that's what Mr. Milling talked about,
3 but that there was adequate evidence and adequate -- 4 there was more than enough information.

5 I haven't even begun to cover what was in the 6 published medical literature at the time that would say 7 that against this regulatory scheme, a reasonable and 8 prudent manufacturer would change its label through 9 either of the mechanisms that Mr. Milling talked about, 10 either through make a change to the new drug 11 application -- the NDA for Extended Release Tylenol, 12 and then making all of the monograph products that it
13 had out there, including Extra Strength Tylenol, 14 consistent with what was in the -- what was in the NDA, 15 which is one regulatory pathway to make those changes, 16 or to do what they did with respect to lowering the 17 dose ultimately, which is simply to do it under the 18 monograph, which you can do under tentative final 19 monograph.

20 Either of those regulatory pathways were 21 available, and we believe that there is more than 22 adequate evidence from which a jury can find that they 23 should have used one or two of those pathways in order 24 to make changes.

25 Let me talk about Ms. Hayes. She was

1 51-years-old and according to all of her doctors, died
2 of acetaminophen acute liver failure, according to her 3 doctors and according to our experts.

4 Now, they have indicated they have another
5 theory about what her diagnosis was. Clearly an issue 6 for the jury to decide. The evidence was she was 7 taking between three and four grams a day for five 8 days. Ms. Jones mentioned ten days. I don't think 9 that's supported by the record.

10 She was, and I'll give you a record here, 11 Judge, that indicates that she was released from the 12 hospital after having had some physical therapy, et 13 cetera, from a lumbar laminectomy that she had.

14 She was given a drug called Lorcet, which is 15 a narcotic similar to Vicodin. She took that for a 16 couple of days, decided that it was not something that 17 she felt good about taking, as a lot of people do, and 18 she switched to Extra Strength Tylenol, and she took it 19 for five days before she ultimately went into the 20 hospital on the 29th of October -- excuse me, the 29th
21 of August 2010.

22 Judge, this is the -- I brought the wrong
23 record here. If you -- if you don't mind, Judge, I 24 would like to be able to supplement the record with the 25 record of that, if you don't mind. I have the hospital

1 record which indicates she took three to four grams and 2 that she was -- on the 29th.

3 At the time, here sister indicated that she 4 had purchased a bottle of Extra Strength Tylenol 5 following a gastric bypass surgery which occurred in 6 the prior year of August of 2009, okay. She purchased 7 that bottle. It had 100 tabs and that was the only 8 bottle that she and her sister had between the time of 9 August of 2009 and August of 2010.

10 Now, just by way of background, this is a 11 little bit of a different family situation than we 12 typically have. These two sisters lived together for 13 their entire adult life from the time that Ms. Denise 14 Hayes was approximately 21-years-old to the time that 15 she passed away at 51-years-old. They lived together 16 exclusively for that time and they split the duties of 17 keeping house together.

18 And as it turns out, Denise, who was deposed 19 in this case, did all the shopping, got all the 20 medications, was the one who picked out all the 21 medication, was the one who went to the store, was the 22 one who bought Extra Strength Tylenol, so she's the one 23 who actually made that call.

24 The evidence was that Ms. Hayes was not 25 eating or drinking for the period of time that she was

1 taking Tylenol. They indicate she was vomiting, she 2 was nauseous, she was drinking soup and broth, there 3 was -- and at the time, there was nothing on the label, 4 and the label from 2000 -- actually, I have to clarify 5 the record here.

6 On Saturday, the 28th of August, 2010, Ms.
7 Hayes, Denise Hayes, was finishing up here -- the end 8 of that 100 pill bottle that they had bought the year 9 before and she asked her sister to go out and get 10 another bottle.

11 There is no indication that that bottle was 12 ever even opened, much less used, okay. So what the -- 13 the only evidence in the case of the drug that she took 14 was from a bottle that she shared with her sister that 15 was purchased in the summer of 2009. And so the label 16 was the one -- the first one that Ms. Jones pointed 17 out, the one without the word, "severe." And, 18 interestingly, that's not the only difference in that 19 label of significance.

20 (Pause in proceedings.)

21 MR. TISI: That label indicated, which is not 22 on the next year, it indicated that which the marketing 23 message had been for 30 years. It has a box on it that 24 says, "How Tylenol products are different. Recommended 25 by most doctors and used by most hospitals."

1 What they didn't tell you was that most 2 doctors, according to their own surveys and, in fact, 3 with their own witnesses testified that they never give 4 Extra Strength Tylenol at the maximum daily doses.
5 They use two or three grams, not four grams as 6 recommended by acetaminophen -- by McNeil. And, in 7 fact, the evidence in this case will be that even 8 defendant's own experts recommend to their patients 9 that they don't exceed two to three grams a day.

10 It also says, "The makers of Tylenol do not 11 manufacture store brands," and as -- "this is safer 12 than" -- implies that it's safer than other drugs like 13 aspirin and those kinds of things. And those are the 14 same marketing messages that Ms. Hayes indicated that 15 both she and her sister had seen for years.

16 THE COURT: What's your position as to how 17 this label on this 2009 box is inadequate?

18 MR. TISI: It's inadequate in multiple days, 19 Judge, and we list that --

20 THE COURT: Give me a couple.

21 MR. TISI: We list that -- we list that in 22 the brief.

23 THE COURT: All right.

24 MR. TISI: Number one is it doesn't 25 indicate -- it talks about liver -- "liver damage" --

1 "liver damage with overdose." Number one, it doesn't 2 indicate that you can have severe liver -- severe fatal 3 injury leading to death. It doesn't tell them what the 4 consequences are.

5 Number two, it doesn't tell them that they're 6 at risk if they take it as directed. It only tells 7 them they take it -- there's a risk if they take it in 8 overdose.

9 Number three, it doesn't tell them that in 10 order to use the drug safely, what you do is what it 11 says to do on the Motrin label, and we have a copy of 12 that if you want to see it, which is take the lowest 13 effective dose. Take one and if one doesn't work, take 14 two. It doesn't tell them take only no more than three 15 grams a day. It says you can take four grams a day.

16 It tells them -- that's just -- those are 17 just some of the ways and those are listed in our 18 brief. And what Ms. -- what Ms. Hayes testified to, 19 and this is important, and I can provide you with the 20 testimony. It's attached to our brief. She said
21 number one is I never would have bought it in the first 22 place. There are plenty of other options out there. I 23 never would have bought it.

24 Number two is I know my sister. We lived 25 together for 30 years. She was -- she was very careful

1 about her medications. She read -- I know she read the 2 label that was on -- the inadequate label, so I know 3 she would have read the other label.

4 And, you know, I'm kind of deviating from my 5 outline here, but under Alabama law, Alabama does not 6 have what's called a heeding presumption. In many 7 states, I believe Pennsylvania actually has it, which 8 says that where there's an adequate instruction, there 9 is a rebuttable presumption that a -- that the warning 10 would have been seen and read. Alabama doesn't have 11 that and we can see that, Judge.

12 On the other hand, what Alabama does say is 13 you can infer that they would have been read -- that 14 they would have been -- especially with somebody who is 15 no longer here, through other evidence.

16 And what it comes down to is if the plaintiff
17 had not read the inadequate warning, there is no
18 evidence that they would have read a proper warning.
19 If there is evidence that they read the inadequate 20 warning, then you can infer that that's part of the 21 evidence in which you can -- the jury can consider 22 whether they would have read and heeded a proper 23 warning.

24 THE COURT: Well, you don't have any evidence 25 here at all as to what she read or didn't read.

1 MR. TISI: Well, her sister testified 2 repeatedly that she read instructions on all of the 3 medications she took. She testified that she would 4 have -- that she knows her sister and she would have -- 5 her habit and practice would be not only to read the 6 instructions, but to follow them.

7 The evidence in the record was -- is that 8 she -- that she, in fact, followed instructions. In 9 fact, the document I hope to give you, which is the -- 10 when she went into the hospital on the 29th, indicates 11 she was taking four grams -- between three and four 12 grams a day.

13 It indicates there is also -- in fact, I
14 asked the hepatology experts in the case, you reviewed 15 all the medical records in this case, Dr. Brown, Dr.
16 Flamm (ph), is there any evidence that she was not 17 compliant with her medications? And Dr. Flamm said 18 there is no evidence. It appears that she was 19 compliant with all -- with the things that she did.
20 Dr. Brown demurely said I see no evidence saying she 21 was compliant, non-compliant, but I'm not going to go 22 so far as to say she was compliant.

23 So even the defendant's experts indicated
24 that she was scrupulous in the way in which she used 25 medication, the way in which she followed doctors'

1 instructions.

2 There is evidence in the case, and every 3 witness was asked, is there any indication she was 4 reckless in how she used Tylenol? No. Is there any 5 evidence that she intended to harm herself? No. Okay.

6 There is one -- there is -- there is one 7 record, one note, that her sister says that she may 8 have taken on a Wednesday when her pain was 9 particularly bad. She may have taken one more dose 10 bringing it up to five grams, five grams a day on one 11 occasion. But that's -- as the evidence will show, 12 that's a foreseeable use that McNeil was well-aware of 13 in how that drug was being used.

14 The totality of the evidence, Judge, when you 15 see the totality of the evidence, as we pointed in our 16 summary judgment motion is that, unfortunately, Ms.
17 Hayes is not here to testify for herself. But, the 18 circumstantial evidence by the one who knew her the 19 most, which is her sister who she lived with for 30
20 years, is that -- is that she followed instructions.
21 Her doctors indicates she followed instructions.

22 And so I think under the cases -- and we've 23 provided those to you in our brief, under Alabama law, 24 there's more than enough evidence from which a jury can 25 conclude that a warning would have been heeded and a

1 warning would have -- would have been read.

2 Which brings us to the third issue, which is 3 if they had been heeded and read, would she have 4 avoided her -- avoided her acute liver failure? Well, 5 number one, if she had -- if she had not taken it at 6 all, which is what her -- which is really what Rebecca 7 Hayes, her sister testified to, is if she knew there 8 was -- there was plenty of other pain relievers out 9 there.

10 If she knew that there was a risk of, you
11 know, death or acute liver failure, that's not the pain 12 reliever that anybody would choose. In fact, the 13 evidence would be in the case that's why they didn't -- 14 that's why McNeil didn't want to included it on the 15 label, because they didn't want people to see other 16 drugs as being safer than theirs.

17 So, clearly, if she didn't take 18 acetaminophen, she wouldn't have had acetaminophen
19 induced liver failure. Number two is if the warnings 20 and instructions had indicated that they -- she take 21 the least effective dose possible, the evidence is 22 really -- is really clear as you get to the lower dose 23 range the risk is almost -- is almost minimal and that 24 she -- the chances of her getting acute liver failure 25 were infinitesimally small.

1 The risk is as you get to the higher levels 2 of this dosing range for several days, and particularly 3 when your body is under the kind of stress that her 4 body was, having just undergone surgery, that's what 5 the evidence will be and that's what the experts will 6 testify to.

7 I want to make one other -- one other point
8 about the adequacy of the label because it -- I think 9 it will weave into the Daubert motions as well. Our 10 expert in this case on warnings and instructions will 11 be -- well, there will be three of them that kind of 12 work together.

13 It will be Dr. -- Mr. Rakanau will talk about 14 what Mr. -- what Mr. Milling talked about, Dr. Goldberg
15 will talk about the effect of marketing, but Dr. Bloom, 16 who will also testify -- and she's given a report that 17 indicates all the ways in which the warnings were 18 inadequate. And I quoted her on page --

19 (Pause in proceedings.)

20 MR. TISI: -- page 18 of her brief from her 21 report, and it summarizes her opinion after going a lot 22 of pages -- after many, many pages of her report. It 23 says, "Not only did acetaminophen induced liver risk, 24 including failure and death, not fully described in the 25 non-prescription packaging, patient subgroups were --

1 vulnerable patient subgroups were not identified, the 2 total daily dose was not reduced from four grams, there 3 was no dose titration," meaning take the lowest 4 effective dose. If you take one, if it works, don't 5 take two, and it talks about advertising and those 6 kinds of things. So we will have expert testimony that 7 the label was inadequate.

8 I will tell you that Dr. Bloom has recently 9 been affirmed by the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in 10 a case called Decker versus GE Healthcare, where she 11 did the very same kind of analysis that we talk about 12 here.

13 And I have those cases in here and I think 14 those are in -- and I'll provide them for the record.
15 I think those are important cases for the Court to 16 consider because it's the district court case, it was 17 another MDL, and it talked about -- talked about 18 pharmaco vigilance and how that weaves into warnings
19 and the inadequacy of the warnings. And those cases 20 are at 956 F.Supp 809, and that's Northern District 21 of -- I have copies here, Judge, if you want -- THE 22 COURT: Sure.

23 MR. TISI: -- Northern District of Ohio, and 24 the Sixth Circuit opinion which affirmed Dr. Bloom's 25 methodology and the way in which he analyzed the label

1 was at 770 F.3d 378214, and I have copies of those if 2 you -- if you want me to provide those to you so you 3 don't have to look them up --

4 THE COURT: Sure.

5 MR. TISI: -- on Lexis as well.

6 THE COURT: Do we have them?

7 LAW CLERK: I have (inaudible).

8 THE COURT: Sure. I'll be happy with a copy.

9 MR. TISI: I'll provide it on our break. The 10 short of it, Judge, is the standard for motion for 11 summary judgment is well-known and understood. It's 12 whether or not there is -- there is enough evidence 13 from which a jury can decide the three questions that 14 Ms. Jones identified up front.

15 Was the warning label inadequate? Would a 16 proper warning have made a -- would have been read and 17 understood, and would it have made a difference? And 18 we believe that the evidence will show that there's 19 more than enough evidence that that would have been the 20 case.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MR. TISI: Unless there's any questions -- I 23 know I've gone on for a long time, but it is an 24 important issue and this is the heart of the case.

25 THE COURT: Right.

1 MR. TISI: I appreciate your indulgence --

2 THE COURT: Right.

3 MR. TISI: -- on this.

4 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Tisi.

5 MR. TISI: Thank you very much. And I'll get 6 you those cases as well.

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 (Pause in proceedings.)

9 THE COURT: Ms. Jones?

10 MS. JONES: I'm going to bring reinforcements 11 next time, Judge.

12 (Pause in proceedings.)

13 (Ms. Jones was not close enough to the sound 14 system to be heard clearly, therefore the following 15 colloquy contains inaudibles.)

16 MS. JONES: I'm going to see, Your Honor, 17 it's been a long day and I'm going to try and make this 18 short and sweet, so if I am making it too short and 19 sweet, if you'll stop me, I'll be glad to go back and 20 regroup.

21 I want to talk just briefly about this whole 22 chart. To some extent, a limited extent, it is 23 correct. It is correct that Extra Strength Tylenol was 24 initially approved under the NDA process. It is 25 correct that that new drug application was removed or

1 withdrawn subsequently and it proceeded under the 2 monograph product, the tentative final monograph. It 3 is also correct that McNeil voluntarily, as I told Your 4 Honor this morning, made some changes to the label
5 under the tentative final monograph.

6 What is not correct about this chart that Mr.
7 Milling stated are two things. One, if you go back and 8 you look at his arguments under 201.57 and 201.80, 9 those are specific doc -- regulations that apply to 10 prescription drugs and biologics by their very title.

11 It is true that under some new drug 12 applications, you can have an obligation to revise a 13 label as soon as there is reasonable evidence of an 14 association of a hazard. But that -- that applies to 15 prescription drugs and most (inaudible) process which 16 Extra Strength Tylenol clearly was not governed by by 17 2009.

18 By 2009, Extra Strength Tylenol was on the 19 market (inaudible) of the (inaudible) final monograph.
20 And what Mr. Milling never really addressed was that in 21 2009, the FDA promulgated the final rules applicable to 22 the content of the label that deals with the liver
23 damage.

24 And under that final rule, McNeil is required
25 to use that label and, in fact, their expert, Mr.

1 Rakanau acknowledged that, testified to that, and his 2 testimony is attached as an exhibit to our motion.

3 That's the only area, Your Honor, that we 4 have raised for Your Honor's consideration at this 5 time, the issue of implied preemption. It is on that 6 narrow aspect of the post-2009 implementation of the 7 federal -- of the final rule.

8 (Pause in proceedings.)

9 THE COURT: Does that 2009 final tentative
10 monograph --

11 MS. JONES: Well, it's -- let me see if I 12 can -- because I know this gets confusing. The 13 entire -- the monograph in its entirety is still 14 tentative.

15 THE COURT: Yes.

16 MS. JONES: However, the rule that was 17 codified in 21 CFR 326 is the rule on what must be 18 included in the label on liver damage (inaudible), and 19 that is a final rule and it has the final full force 20 and effect as though the -- as though the entire 21 monograph had been finalized.

22 THE COURT: All right.

23 MS. JONES: Does that make sense? That 24 portion of the rule has become final so --

25 THE COURT: Okay. And even though that's 1 final, does that preclude McNeil from modifying the 2 warning label to include maybe a stronger one?

3 MS. JONES: As to the context of what's 4 covered in that final rule, yes, it cannot do that 5 without final approval.

6 Now, what we're talking about -- let me see 7 if I can -- is that that final rule -- and that's the 8 reason, Your Honor, that the Wyeth versus Levine 9 argument doesn't apply here, is that because you don't 10 have applicable here what might become a "Changes being 11 effected" provision, which is what Mr. Milling argued 12 was from the 314.70, is that you can change the label
13 without prior approval. Well, that's not applicable 14 here because that's a final ruling.

15 THE COURT: Wait a minute. The 21 CFR 326?

16 MS. JONES: 326 is the final rule --

17 THE COURT: Final rule.

18 MS. JONES: -- on what must --

19 THE COURT: So you can't modify --

20 MS. JONES: -- be on the label.

21 THE COURT: They can't modify --

22 MS. JONES: Cannot modify.

23 THE COURT: -- their label as long as it's 24 covered by that final rule?

25 MS. JONES: That's right.

1 THE COURT: All right.

2 MS. JONES: That's what the testimony will 3 do.

4 (Pause in proceedings.)

5 MS. JONES: Mr. Milling talked about policies
6 and the -- and, frankly, Your Honor, this doesn't go 7 all directly to the issue of the failure to warn, but 8 it kind of -- I think it (inaudible) understand the 9 entirety of this case.

10 The policy of the FDA is that the public 11 health thinks that it -- that the public health in the 12 United States demands that drugs be available 13 over-the-counter without the necessity of having to go 14 to the doctor's.

15 And what the FDA has done over a period of 16 time and, indeed, it will probably come into evidence 17 in this case, is that in 1998 it implemented what's 18 called the drug facts label.

19 And the drug facts label is just a format, if 20 you will, of exactly what must be in an 21 over-the-counter drug. So that every over-the-counter
22 drug arguably has the same format where you look at X 23 place for directions and X place for warnings and 24 whatever.

25 It's been the policy of the FDA that that

1 language be written for a consumer and written so that 2 it would prompt the consumer to consult a doctor under 3 certain circumstances.

4 For example, in this case, if a consumer took 5 an overdose of Tylenol would prompt them to consult a 6 doctor, and the FDA's policies and procedures have 7 generally been that that's what we want to do as 8 opposed to explaining to the consumer the details of 9 the medical complications it might cause.

10 THE COURT: All right.

11 MS. C. JONES: I don't think -- that really,
12 truly is not an issue in this, but I think it's helpful 13 to kind of understand some of the background about 14 that.

15 Going back to the three questions that are 16 important for the Court to consider, which at least I 17 think both parties agree on this, is --

18 THE COURT: Yes. Yes.

19 MS. JONES: -- whether or not the label was 20 inadequate, two, whether or not an adequate label would 21 have been, or a different label would have been read 22 and heeded, and three, whether or not it would have 23 made a difference in the outcome.

24 If we go back to the first one, whether or 25 not it was inadequate, what I suggest to Your Honor is

1 that Mr. Milling and Mr. Tisi went through all of the 2 history that spanned a period of 40 years before 3 2009 and clearly set forth -- everything they set 4 forth was information that the FDA had when it 5 implemented the final label in 2009 and implemented the 6 warning with respect to the liver damage that was 7 implemented.

8 I suggest to Your Honor that under Alabama
9 law and everything else that we've seen that, in fact, 10 the warnings on their face are adequate because they 11 do, in fact, advise the consumer of exactly the 12 condition that they claim the decedent had, acute liver 13 failure, albeit in layman's terms in this instance, 14 liver damage.

15 And when you look at the Alabama law, if you
16 look specifically at the Gurly case, I think the Gurly 17 case sets stance for the very proposition that when you 18 warn of the very event, if you will, of which you're at 19 risk, then the warning is adequate because it doesn't 20 have to be perfect in the sense of setting forth all of 21 the various mechanical and scientific and medical terms 22 that you might want to set out for a doctor, or that 23 you might want to set out for (inaudible). The point 24 is we revised the definition.

25 The fact of the matter is we've taken the 1 position, and I think it's the correct one, that -- the 2 testimony is that a bottle of Tylenol was purchased in 3 August of 2006. That testimony comes from the 4 decedent's sister. They also said they had one they 5 purchased in 2009. But immediately after the death 6 here, immediately after the death, the plain -- the 7 sisters file an insurance claim in which they said 8 there was an overdose of Tylenol that lead to the 9 death.

10 That's important for two reasons. On the day
11 of her death, the sisters knew arguably of a claim 12 against McNeil and Tylenol and yet (inaudible) the 13 bottle of Tylenol that was supposedly new was disposed 14 of.

15 And rather than us having the benefit of 16 knowing exactly what it is, since we don't, I think it 17 is appropriate for us to presume that it was in 2000 -- 18 the post-2009 label that I showed you on the 2010 19 because that's certainly what would have gotten -- been 20 purchased at that time.

21 But, more importantly or just as important,
22 when we get to the second prong of the labeling issue 23 is whether or not the decedent would have read and 24 heeded the warning, there is no proof (inaudible), the 25 plaintiffs cannot meet that requirement, and the reason

1 they can't is the following.

2 First, the plaintiff's doctor, and this is 3 uncontroverted, recommended that she take regular 4 strength Tylenol, not (inaudible) that recommendation.
5 Two, the plaintiff's sisters filed a claim saying she 6 had taken an overdose, so she didn't follow that 7 (inaudible).

8 Three, Mr. Tisi says -- I'm sorry, wow. Mr.
9 Tisi said that she didn't take it for ten days, but the 10 plaintiffs admitted in their brief the material fact -- 11 our material fact, based upon the evidence that was 12 there, was that plaintiff alleges that decedent, Denise
13 Hayes, ingested Extra Strength Tylenol from August 12th
14 to 29. That's 17 days. And the plaintiff's response 15 was to admit that.

16 So we believe, based upon the evidence and 17 based upon their admission, she took it for 17 days 18 rather than the ten days that are suggested there.

19 THE COURT: Now, how should I approach that 20 on summary judgment? I mean that's all -- that's all 21 factual, right?

22 MS. JONES: That's all factual, but it's 23 admitted. It's not controverted.

24 THE COURT: Right. But my point is there are 25 factual questions here about whether she would have

1 heeded the warning, even whether the warning was 2 adequate, I'm not sure if I can decided that as a
3 matter of law. And I think, you know, your Celotex
4 burden is that you raise the motion, they come forward 5 with the evidence that shows that there is -- that 6 there's a question of fact here, and you have to show 7 that there's really no question by fact. And we have 8 an awful lot of information developed in discovery. We 9 have talked about experts and we have talked about the 10 sister and depositions. I mean it seems to me that 11 there's a lot factual question to be resolved here.

12 MS. JONES: Your Honor, I think you are 13 correct in the sense that if -- that -- with all due 14 respect, I think there's one issue in your analysis 15 that I think --

16 THE COURT: Oh, feel free.

17 MS. JONES: -- is a little bit off, is that 18 they must come forward with admissible evidence --

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MS. JONES: -- to create a question of fact.

21 THE COURT: And what about the testimony of 22 the sister? Is that inadmissible?

23 MS. JONES: I think it is. I think it's -- I
24 think the testimony of the sister --

25 THE COURT: It's character evidence?

1 MS. JONES: It would either be character
2 evidence and doesn't come in under 404, or it's pure 3 speculation as to what, you know, she would have done.
4 It becomes self-serving evidence that there's really no
5 way to contradict it --

6 THE COURT: Yes.

7 MS. JONES: -- other than to point to other
8 ways that she did not follow the direction. But I 9 think it's inadmissible as either speculation, lack of 10 personal knowledge, or character evidence, so it 11 doesn't come in at all. That's the -- that's the basis 12 for saying that there's no question of fact on that.
13 And then --

14 THE COURT: So if the sister is out, then 15 there's no -- your position is there's no evidence that 16 she would have heeded the warning --

17 MS. JONES: That's correct.

18 THE COURT: -- and that a better warning
19 would have prevented the harm?

20 MS. JONES: That's right. In fact, there's 21 no -- there's no evidence whatsoever, no expert 22 testimony, there's nothing that suggests that a 23 different warning would have led to a different result 24 and would have prevented the harm.

25 THE COURT: Okay. All right, thank you. I

1 said I would keep you until 3:30 so -- sit down, Clay.

2 MR. MILLING: Your Honor, can I just have one
3 minute?

4 MS. JONES: Please.

5 THE COURT: One minute.

6 MS. JONES: Your Honor --

7 THE COURT: Aren't you outraged?

8 MS. JONES: I am outraged. I am outraged 9 that they have had four times as long as I have and 10 you're letting him have another minute.

11 MR. MILLING: You're awesome for doing it for 12 me, Christy, I appreciate it. Your Honor --

13 THE COURT: You can have a minute.

14 MR. MILLING: Your Honor, I just have to say
15 you asked the question. If in 2009 when the final rule 16 on the label, which was not a monograph rule, it was a 17 labeling rule, could you do more? And it's in your 18 papers at 330.11, it's in your lap. It's called an NDA 19 deviation and it's done all the time.

20 It says, "NDA deviation from applicable
21 monograph. A new drug application requesting approval 22 of an OTC deviation in any respect from a monograph 23 that has become final shall be in the forms required by 24 Section 314.50 of this chapter, but shall include a 25 statement that the product meets all conditions of the 1 applicable monograph except for the deviation for which 2 approval is requested and may omit all information

3 except that pertinent to the deviation."

4 Mr. Rakanau explained it's a letter, you're 5 right. And for defense to get up and say you can't 6 change it when it's right -- when everybody, even 7 Judith Jones notes, every expert notes, NDA deviation 8 is also called a citizen's petition, there are multiple 9 ways. But common sense also tells us whether it's in 10 the trucking industry, the auto industry, the 11 government regulations set the floor, not the ceiling.

12 THE COURT: All right. And what's -- where 13 do I find that NDA deviation?

14 MR. MILLING: It's on -- I gave it to you.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 MR. MILLING: It's -- we talked about 330.12, 17 and it's on the top of that page, Section 330.11 18 called --

19 THE COURT: All right.

20 MR. MILLING: -- "NDA deviation."

21 THE COURT: Thank you.

22 MR. MILLING: It's in your materials.

23 THE COURT: Ms. Jones?

24 MS. JONES: Your Honor, I think your question 25 to me was specifically whether or not it could be

1 changed. It cannot be changed without prior approval
2 of the FDA. It cannot be. That doesn't -- that 3 provision doesn't change that.

4 MR. MILLING: That doesn't -- that's not the 5 issue on preemption, Your Honor. The issue is can it 6 be changed. It can be changed.

7 THE COURT: All right.

8 MR. MILLING: And to be clear, this is not 9 the vaccine case that Your Honor provided over where 10 the FDA said we will not allow the change in the back 11 scene. I think it's called the Sykes case.

12 THE COURT: All right. Okay. Thank you very 13 much. We didn't get through our entire list, not 14 surprisingly. We have one more summary judgment motion 15 to argue. Let's schedule that for our next case 16 management conference. Does that work. Okay.

17 MR. MILLING: Your Honor, on behalf of the 18 plaintiffs, first of all, we thank you for your time 19 and what you've done today for us today and for 20 everybody.

21 We were talking at lunch and I have not had a 22 chance to run this by Christy, but I know part of your 23 goal has been to get through the motions in limine so 24 we can get our deposition cuts better, and I would say 25 on behalf of the -- we've talked about on behalf of the 1 plaintiffs, we would welcome the opportunity if the 2 Court is interested to argue those by phone, for you to 3 put limitations on time for us, to tell us which ones

4 to do and which ones you don't -- you're not interested 5 in hearing argument on.

6 Our goal is to get the answers on the motions
7 in limine, and if the Court has an hour any time, you 8 know, if you want to say ten-minute limit or something, 9 we would be fine with that to get through those 10 motions.

11 THE COURT: All right, I think we can do
12 that.

13 MS. JONES: Well, I move for a time limit on 14 the plaintiffs.

15 THE COURT: I think that's a good idea.

16 MS. JONES: Secondly, Your Honor, I do think 17 it would be helpful for us to get through the 18 dispositive motions before we do that.

19 We will, of course, do whatever Your Honor
20 requests with respect to the rest of them, but I do 21 think the dispositive motions may have some impact on 22 what we do with respect --

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 MS. JONES: -- to the rest of those.

25 THE COURT: All right. We're in agreement

1 with that. Okay. All right, thank you very much.

2 Really excellent work all day today. Thank you.

3 MS. JONES: Thank you, Your Honor.

4 ALL: Thank you, Your Honor.
